Trimming Tabs Squadron I

Here, gentlemen, is the Squadron I column for those of you who have been able to open your eyes after bringing your girl back from the "Wing Ball" just in time, and then got up Sunday morning to take the lass to breakfast. And also for you fellows who were not lucky enough to get a woman, the following lines are written.

Mr. Aton really had a time of it Friday night, or should we say Saturday morning. His girl friend was supposed to come in on that late train from Dallas. He went to sleep early Friday night, and set his alarm clock in order to get up and meet the train. He was down there to meet the train, but there was no girl. He met the Dallas train at noon the next day, but still no girl. He went to the room he reserved for her, and she was there. She had arrived the night before by bus. A telegram had been sent to Mr. Aton about the change in plans, but it was never received. We hope you didn't lose too much hair due to the incident.

Quite a wet uniform appeared on that manly body of Mr. Marshall Saturday night. Many men would like to have you explain under what kind of a shower you were standing, that you happened to have your uniform on.

Let's hold a little court session right here in the column. The fact of the cast is that a certain gentleman of room 55 goes into other rooms to borrow chairs because the chairs in his room are always filled. Gentlemen, what is your verdict?

Congratulations are in order for Mr. George Kerkorian on becoming a father. When did it happen and where?

Misters Carter and Kerkorian were really decked out for the gala affair of the week-end. Sharp looking "futures," don't we think?

Seems that the Chaplain will be wearing out a great number of punchers now. Just about everyone is officially a member of the A. and M. chapter of the one and only club of mourners. What are our troubles now? Why, we are all hot pilots now and have no worries—except check rides. Let's don't get Checkitis and get to worrying about that ghost ride.

They say Mr. Bates is getting mighty free with his pictures. He walks around at the North Gate handing them to anyone who will accept. What about giving us one too, Mister?

Comes time to get off the press. Here's letting you know that there are only twenty-seven more shopping days until Christmas. So long, fellows.

Spotlight on Sports

Sunday night Squadron I quintet defeated the ASTP five by a score of 55 to 29. Squadron I controlled the game all the way. The score at the half was 29 to 13 in favor of the Air Corps.

Sunday afternoon Group I had a little football game, in which the teams consisted of players from the coast, and the other from the middle west. The coastal team won by the large score of 85 to 43. Lorenzetti was the boy who led the winning team.

It is wonderful football weather. Squadrons I and II would like to schedule a few games; how about it Squadrons III, IV, and V?

Squadron V gives their squadron lots of support. We would like to see the other squadrons support their team. The boys play a better game if they know you are behind them. Ask your squadron athletic officer when your team plays next. Squadron I plays III Monday night.

To players going across the drill field to the gym take care you don't come near the stack for the Aggie bonfire. Don't come near it, especially at night. The Aggies have worked hard and they aren't taking any chances.

To whom it may concern: Notre Dame lucky as they may be still are undefeated. Lucky—any team that beats the 2-3-4-5 ranking teams in the country isn't lucky. I think that Notre Dame will remain undefeated when they meet Great Lakes Saturday.

Hangar Flying Squadron III

Now that another Wing Ball is something of the past, we'll see who was doing what over the weekend. Naturally we can't think of all the little things that happened, or tell of them either. But here are the juiciest ones. It seems the Smith Brothers got their signals mixed Saturday night. Mister Milton C. Smith was supposed to have a double date with Mister Wayne Smith and two girls from Bryan. About an hour before the dance he suddenly developed a cold and couldn't make it. But here is the real story. Mr. Milton C. had a miraculous recovery and showed up at the dance rather late thinking his partner had already left. The first person he saw upon entering the door was the girl he was supposed to have the date with. How he talked his way out of that one we'll never know, but one eye does look a little black. . . . And speaking of black eyes, did you notice the one on Mister Schlagel? He claims he walked into a tree but that excuse is older than we are. With all the boxing you are supposed to have done, Mister Schlagel, you should know by now when to duck. . . . Witness the case of poor Mister Kueck. He had a blind date, and was having a very nice time until he discovered that a certain party from Houston was present. When his date went to the powder room he disappeared and could not be found for about an hour. When he returned to his date she told him she had developed a sudden headache and would like to go home. As he walked out the door he was seen to look back over his shoulder longingly, and sigh. If you will refer to our column of Saturday last, Mister Kueck, you will see that we warned you. . . . Evidently Mister Bowman doesn't have the eagerness of an Eager Beaver. He and an unnamed companion went to call on a certain young lady Sunday afternoon, and gave as the reason that they were looking for a singer for the Dance Band, but we know better. Upon arriving at the lady's house they discovered young gentlemen from the Allen Military Academy. It developed into a case of who could out-sit who, and after about an hour of painful silence and dirty looks our two heroes retreated, but the retreat was definitely not according to plan. Let's get on to the ball, gentlemen, and stay in there and fight. . . . By the way, did anyone notice Tom Nee Sunday morning? The top of his head is full of lumps which he acquired from dancing with a girl about six inches taller than he. It seems that every time he took a step he

Wing News

Gentlemen, the Wing Ball is over. No one will deny that it wasn't a great success. It would have gone over even better if there had been a few more women present but transportation problems are difficult in war times. The dance was lively and ran at a rapid pace with plenty of cutting in going on. Though there were a few beavers among you who were slightly hesitant at the start, your editor noticed that even they loosened up later in the evening.

Twenty minutes after the dance began the doors opened and the honor guard marched down a cleared lane to take their post.

hanged his head on her chin. Maybe that accounts for that punch drunk look. . . . Mr. Reinhardt was so burned up Saturday night that he raised the room temperature four degrees. He couldn't get more than two steps at a time before someone would cut. And the rub was it wasn't a beaver or two who was doing his time but a visitor from down around the Marine barracks. But don't worry Mr. Reinhardt, there will be a Wing Ball next month and maybe you can walk her to the station. . . . Gentlemen, if you want to see someone turn red, question Mr. Vern Miller as to his activities of Saturday night and the way way he explains what happened is really a riot, isn't it Vern? . . . And that winds us up for now, except to ask Mr. Gust how many times he had his card punched. That is really a clever idea. Why don't you give the above-mentioned Mr. Miller one of them, he could use it. That's all. See you later. 66.

length of Sbis Hall and built to rest. The Aeronautical department loaned us the aircraft wings, engines, props, rudders, and stands. Dr. McCorkle of the Physics Lecture Building let our carpenters use his workshop to prepare the rotating propellers and advised on the construction of them. The electrical equipment, such as wiring, etc., was furnished by mess hall employees. Our gratitude is given to Mr. Ted Hill of the Administration building for making possible our broadcast there last Saturday morning.

There was a lot of work that went into making this dance a success and a lot of cooperation has been given to us by various and sundry organizations, stores, etc. Perhaps the students of this detachment would be interested to know exactly what cooperation we did receive in putting this across. From W.S.D. Clothiers we obtained eight Sam Browne belts for our Honor Guard. From Loupot's we were loaned two more. Waldrop's, at the North Gate loaned us eight saber chains. The sabers were furnished by Mr. Boyer of Ross Hall. The Navy loaned us the white gloves. The Campus theatre and the Guion Hall theatre furnished us with large spotlights. Mr. Clark of the Agricultural Experiment building furnished us with some small spotlights and the Aggie student body loaned us the

"There will be a gigantic era of sport following the war. The government will take a more active part in sports that it ever has before—for it foresees an America in the future which will have shorter working hours and many more hours of leisure for its people. To maintain a healthy America, both physically as well as morally, the United States government must and will design widespread competitive athletic programs during this war period, in order to "sow the seeds," as General MacArthur sagely remarked, "which will eventually bear the fruits of victory." —Schroeder in the Los Angeles City College Collegian.
