Welcome to Aggieland . . .

This is the campus of Aggieland. Many people who are here for the game will come here as students of Texas University or as their alumni to root for their team.

Out on the field will be two teams that will show every example of fine sportsmanship. The main root of all trouble is not where the actual playing takes place, but it usually comes from the fans.

If the Texas fans act as guests while on the campus, they will be treated fairly. With this thought in mind, the Battalion would like to take this means to speak for the Corps in wishing the visit here a happy one with the hopes of getting a like treatment next year.

Thanksgiving . . .

"Humbly I thank Thee for all that You have brought me—for the joys and also for the trials."

We have so much to be thankful for in this year of stife and trouble. Across the ocean in the war-torn land of Europe, Asia, and Africa there are children without a crumb of bread to satisfy their racking hunger or a stitch of clothing for their cold, naked bodies.

It is symbolic that America alone celebrates this day of thanksgiving. It is only we who have so much to be thankful for . . . Liberty, Happiness, and the Necessities of Life.

Let us pause from our work for a moment to say a prayer—one of thanks for what we have and wishing for the world to have the same on the morrow.

PENNY'S SERENADE

By W. L. Penberthy

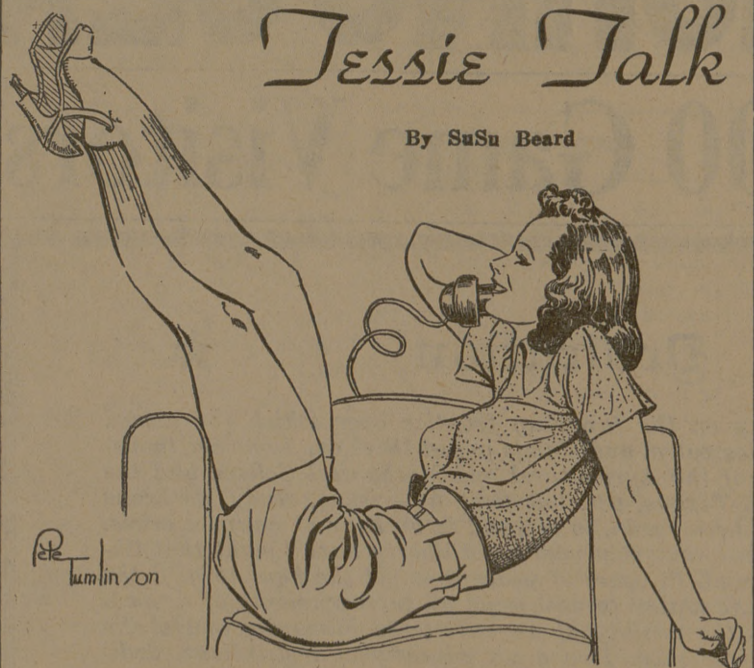

Today on our campus will be played the outstanding Thanksgiving Day game in our country. Until comparatively recent years this game did not attract the attention which it deserved but today the football of this conference is on a par with the best in the land and the game will attract a great deal of interest and attention.

These two schools have been rivals for many years and this rivalry has changed from one in which the aim was to beat the other team instead of just outscoring it, to a very wholesome one in which the very highest degree of sportsmanship is evident.

The Texas team and its followers are our guests for the day; let's treat them as such and let the contest be decided by the two teams, on the field.

'Hello' for this week. Are you all getting as excited over this week's football game as we are? T. S. C. W. gets only one holiday, therefore, many of the girls who planned to go to Aggieland will have to stay here.

Last week, national food and nutrition week was stressed on this campus by programs in the dining halls during the evening meal. Each club was in charge of a program centered around a certain disliked food.

Our Freshman-Sophomore dance was a decided success. Ever so many Aggies came up, and as they well know they were hugely welcomed by all.

Realistic Patriotism
An encouraging thing is the comparative honesty and sanity of America's current crop of war-time books, compared with the flood of violent, uncritical nationalism that poured out of the presses during the First World War.

Two books that I noticed in the Browsing Room this morning illustrate fairly well these two aspects of our war-time spirit. I Am An American is a collection of short statements by eminent foreign-born Americans for what America means to them.

The foreign born contributors to I Am An American include such notables as Einstein, the physicist, Louis Adamic, the social writer, Walter Damrosch, the musician, the actresses Claudette Colbert, Louise Rainer, and Elissa Landi, Stephen S. Wise, the Rabbi, Ales trip, this time to Austin for the Turkey Day game. Since this parade was unofficial, the annual parade up Congress Avenue was not to be held.

The Don Cossack chorus appeared at Town Hall on Tuesday night. They had strong competition, that evening, since the bonfire was in its glory then.

Before they left for the game in Austin, the Seniors didn't forget the Elephant Walk. Wednesday morning after breakfast to the tune of the bass horn and clarinet, the Class of '43 marched up and down Military Walk in their slow, traditional way.

Aggieland has changed in twelve months. This year's Seniors march down Military Walk in G.I. boots; their tears are unchanged though. Only 2,000 Aggies make up the Corps of Cadets.

best. While it may be lacking in the peaks of uproarious hilarity evident in some predecessors, its overall comedy content does not suffer due to the rapid, sustained flow of dippy dialogue and gags.

The Lowdown: A top-rate sidesplitter. Starting a two-day run at Guion Hall today is "Always in My Heart." The film stars Kay Francis, Walter Huston, and Gloria Warren.

The best thought of the special program is the thrill it will give the 11,000 Aggies in the armed services all over the world. It is a safe bet that as many as possible will be hanging on to a radio as well as a gun on Thanksgiving Day.

OL' ARMY--

Let's get in there and win that ball game Turkey Day for those 11,000 Aggies fighting on the battle fronts of Democracy all over the world.

They're in there giving all they have to keep America and the rest of the world right for us to enjoy—and they'll be listening to every play over the short wave.

So Let's Give It to Them — make every play count and win that game for those old boy's who are following the stars and stripes through the smoke and hell of freedom's battles.
