A Way of Life . . .

A great deal has been said in regard to preserving the "American Way of Life" since the beginning of the present war. A great deal has been done about preserving it on the far flung battle fronts of the world . . . many men have given their lives, men have sacrificed their limbs . . . many men have suffered the torture and hell of prison camps . . . that the "American Way of Life" should endure.

America and Americans have risen to world power through outstanding leadership. Their superiority in every field of activity . . . science, engineering, medicine, economics, business, transportation, communication . . . has been the result of far-sighted, well trained leaders.

The leaders of tomorrow must and will come from the generation that today is in college, the men of A. & M. and the men who are beginning college courses all over the land. The responsibility resting on their shoulders is tremendous! So it behooves the men of this school and the thousands of other schools in this land to expend their every effort to advance themselves to as near the point of perfection as possible.

Student Personnel Office . . .

An organization on the campus which is in operation primarily for the use of new students is that of the Student Personnel Office. Its chief purpose is to help the freshmen in their orientation period and that, to many boys who enter college for the first time, is found to be quite a difficult task.

Under the guidance of George B. Wilcox, many new students find help and guidance that is unusual anywhere except in homes. Wilcox and his staff are ready and willing to listen to the troubles of anyone who has "hit a snag" in living the way of the college student.

For any problem, Wilcox will give any help that he might be able to give. If college life gets difficult and a conference with someone who has had experience in such things will help, go to this office in the Academic building and seek advice.

Remember that this office is for use not only for the freshmen, but also for other students who might need help. Anyone, freshman or upperclassmen, needing advice or counsel on any subject should seek it at the Student Personnel Office.

Expresses Faith In Junior Colleges

Junior colleges throughout the nation received praise coupled with the warning that their big test of survival is yet to come from Dr. Raymond Walters, University of Cincinnati president, when he addressed the American Association of Junior College in convention at Cincinnati during the first part of January.

Without parallel in the world except where introduced by American educators in the Near or Far East, the junior college, he said, has pioneered as a distinctive American development.

Declaring he spoke as an "observer of higher education", President Walters stated the junior college movement "has a sound educational basis and is accomplishing a useful purpose. Its growth to 600 institutions in 45 states, with a peacetime total of 300,000 students, affords evidence that the American people approve."

"Known as a product almost entirely of the twentieth century," the junior colleges have had a period of existence "not long enough nor is the growth secure enough to guarantee permanence in the American educational system," the Cincinnati president added.

"Can your colleges pass through this fiery furnace of war? Where will they be a decade from now in the turmoil of postwar reconstruction?"

"You deserve praise for your moderation as to scope and claims, blocking out an educational area hitherto insufficiently served, studying needs, and intelligently and faithfully working to meet those needs."

"You have not blown your own horn nor beat the bass drum concerning what you plan to do but have proceeded quietly to work. And to your great credit, you have decided upon a degree for completing two years of college work, associate of arts, which is distinctive, appropriate, and in accord with Cardinal Newman's counsel to 'call things by their right names.'"

The Lowdown on Campus Distractions

Sharply removed from the scene of worldly strife, "Swamp Water," which is the attraction at the Campus today and Wednesday, is the story of a group of Georgians who border the Okefenokee swamp and find themselves conditioned by its dangers.
