

Visitors Day For Poultry Dept. Reported Success

Arrangements for a "Visitor's Day" for the Poultry Short Course, which is now in session on the campus, were completed. June 15 has been set aside for the occasion according to Prof. E. D. Parnell, director of the course and head of the poultry department. The course started June 5 and will end the last of the coming week. The third and final week will take up the subject of turkey raising. The first two weeks were devoted to the care, raising, and production of chickens.

Many poultry enthusiasts were on the campus for "Visitor's Day" to visit the Poultry Department and to see the work being carried on by the students of the Poultry Short Course.

aims of the short course. He was followed by L. C. Elliot, Regional manager of the Fourth Region of Civil Aeronautics Administration, Fort Worth, who spoke on preparing the small town for aviation. After this, speeches were made by outstanding men of aviation in this section of the country until 6:00 p.m., when the meeting was adjourned until 7:15 p.m., the time of the first dinner. Speaker at the banquet was Carl Marshall, an attorney from Gulfport, Mississippi, who spoke on "The Airplane as a Significant Factor in American Community Life of Tomorrow."

On Thursday morning the main course, which is divided into three main parts, began. Part I concerns Problems of Airport Operation; Part II, Airport Planning, Location, Financing, Design, and Construction; Part III, Problems of Airport Maintenance.

Friday night a general discussion of all topics and conclusions reached will be held by all who attended the conference, and the meeting will be closed.

This is to be the first of conferences to be held every year at about this time, according to Mr. Gilchrist. After the war this conference will probably be expanded and put in as a regular short course, just as the course in Highway Engineering is now given.
