the present time they are killing an average of 150 head of cattle and about fifty hogs a week. At one time, when there were 10,000 Aggies, sailors, marines, and air corps men on the campus, the slaughter house killed an average of 400 head.

The slaughter house was erected in 1941 and all meat killed there is government inspected. All of the cattle and hogs killed are collection will be a specialty of the library and will be complete as they maintain it. At present there is considerable difficulty in securing these maps and charts because of military and other restrictions. However, whenever possible this collection will be maintained at par.

This library will be of great value to those engineers and students over the State of Texas. In the years to come, volumes will become rare, and the knowledge of books will become indispensable. With such a resource of knowledge available on the campus in the future, for full time circulation, certainly no one will pass up the opportunity to deepen this advantage. With the post war planning being completed, this library will rank as one of the technical achievements of the time.

Economics Course Completed by Girls

Approximately thirty girls have completed the home economics course offered by Consolidated School this summer. The course turned out to a very successful one, according to Mrs. Carl W. Landiss, Home Economics teacher at Consolidated.

Starting immediately after the spring semester of school, the girls and their parents conferred with Mrs. Landiss about projects to be undertaken during the summer course. While the girls did most of the work in their homes, several meetings were held at the school as means to check on the girls' projects. About August 31, a display was held at the school to show the girls' work. Projects were not limited to one certain kind. There were displays of canned goods which have been put up during the summer, and displays of some of the girls' excellent handiwork, done along the sewing line.

Not all girls attending school were eligible for the summer course. Those who took the course were required to have had one semester of home economics. And those who successfully completed this summer course will receive one-half credit in their school work in home economics. The minimum amount of hours required in the course was one hundred hours although most of the girls did many more hours of work. Mrs. Landiss said that those girls who will receive credit for their work have not been named yet. This will be done the first week of school this fall after the reports on their work have been checked.

lege offered to make its engineering collection of some 11,000 volumes available to engineers through this library. This collection is to be transferred from Cushing Library, and is expected to be done within the next two months. Besides this service, the college agreed to construct a building to house the library and staff. However, the war put a block into this idea and as a result the library is now housed where it is now located. In 1941, the library was operated under the control of the Engineering Experiment Station, and was so until the end of the fiscal year, August 31, 1944. It is now under the supervision of the Department of Engineering, P. S. Ballance, librarian, was sent here in 1941, to set up the library and to organize its proceedings.

Work toward furnishing the reading room of the library has been in process for several months. Ballance said that the library is not ready to accommodate large crowds yet, but that the library is open to circulate books to those who wish them. The books available now are periodicals and technical volumes. Magazines are circulated, but soon they will be bound into volumes for easy reference. Since the library is maintained by the college, all students and faculty of A. & M. are free to use the resources offered by the engineering library. In addition to this number using the library facilities, there are some five thousand registered engineers who take advantage of the circulation.

Books now in the shelves total about 8000 and with the addition of part of the technical collection from Cushing Library, the number is expected to reach about 10,000. The library is a subscriber to a large number of the periodicals available over the country. Besides technical books, the library is working on maintaining a special collection of maps and charts of the country. Ballance said that this
