

JUNIORS

hard and landed an appointment to the military academy at West Point. Whether McGurk will continue here until the time of his appointment, he did not say, however he plans to come back to A. & M. next semester.

Engineers are not the only ones that are in deep water with the draft. Charles Trickey, animal husbandry student, seems to be in the clutches of the army air corps. Trickey is one of many boys who will leave here at one time when the air corps decides to take their next bunch of recruits. But Trickey plans to come back next semester for as long as possible. Another in the same situation as Trickey is Bob Seyle, our other junior yell-leader. Bob is majoring in aero engineering. He also plans to come back next semester for as long as the air corps will detain calling in the new cadets.

John Murchison, who hails from Galveston and is studying E. E., does not seem worried about being called by his draft board. His optimism is warranted by the way he keeps plugging the books at night, buying serge, dating local girls, and such. Ah, but to be at such an ease, Khaler Goodloe, also from Galveston, and taking animal husbandry, is another of these lucky guys with high views about the draft. Goodloe seems certain he will be able to keep plugging those grade points in as long as he wants to. No worries, no nothing . . .

Out of the great majority of the men in the junior class, there are few in comparison who do not plan to come back. There are doubtful ones who do not know how long they will get to stay since the matter of deferments is out, and time after that fateful day is given out by a merciful draft board. However, as a whole, the class will be back next semester. As a rule, the draft seems to be hitting men of all studies, whether business administration, engineering, or maybe vet medicine. Uncle Sam isn't particular. But if you don't get that certain greetings by the time you expected, don't be disappointed, just pay your box rent, room reservation, fees, and sweat with the rest of us. Be glad to have you with us.

DANCE

of October 20 followed by a corps ball on Saturday night, October 21. It is tentatively planned to honor the navy on this date.

The other dances follow as listed: Sophomore Ball and a corps ball on October 27 and 28 respectively; freshman ball on November 3 followed by a corps ball; corps ball on December 15 followed by an all service dance; Senior Ring Dance January 12 with a Corps Ball January 13.

Because of the small number of seniors it has been mentioned that part of the reserve fund available from profits from other dances will be used to help finance the Senior Ring Dance.

Efforts are being made by the Committee on Student Activities to secure a name band for the December 15 and 16 dances. Other bands have not been announced as yet but the Aggieband Orchestra will play for a few of the dances.

Two Books Donated to College By '04 Ex

The College Library has been increased by the donation of two historical books by R. H. Glass, '04, of Lufkin, Texas.

The books are Napoleon Bonaparte's First Campaign (1889), and The Campaign of Marengo (1901).

Author of the books is Captain Herbert H. Sargent, U. S. A., who was commandant here while Glass was a cadet. Glass remembers Captain Sargent as "a strict disciplinarian but very popular with the cadet corps."

The service ceiling of any airplane is the highest altitude at which a plane can still climb 100 feet a minute, while its absolute ceiling is the maximum altitude the plan can reach.

Over 2,900 girls are serving as recreational workers in more than 800 service clubs scattered over the world.
