

Aggies Lead Conference On Offensive Average

Coach Norton's gridders are leading the conference as far as offensive averages are concerned, and also boast the leading scorer. Paul "Bubba" Yates who has 48 points to his credit. Only two fumbles were committed by the Cadets in the game with N. T. A. C., so maybe their acute case of fumbling is a thing of the past. It was during the T. C. U. game that the Cadets committed nine fumbles which paved the way for their downfall.

Jimmy Cashion, regular quarterback, is expected to be in the starting lineup Saturday, after being held out of action in the N.T.A.C. game. Jimmy suffered a leg injury the latter part of last week, but seems to be about normal again. Performing in his position last week was Tom Daniels who took over and ran the team like a veteran. Gene Spires alternated between his halfback slot and the quarterback position and looked especially good on his passes.

The Aggies starting backfield is still somewhat indefinite. Coach Norton can start either Bob Butchofsky or Mann Scott at the right halfback post. Butch is rounding into playing shape after being shelved with a broken jaw, while Scott has been coming along fast the last few games after getting off to a slow start. The other three Aggie backs Saturday will be Jimmy Cashion, Bob Goff, and Paul Yates.

Arkansas will boast a four pound per man weight advantage over the Aggies, averaging 191 pounds to the Cadet's 187. The Hog line averages 191 while their backs hit 190. The Aggie forwards average 196 and the backs 170.

BOOKS

Michael Straight. 417 pages, 1943. A twenty-four year old American has produced the best book (in this reviewer's opinion) about post-war problems.

What To Do With Italy, by Gaetano Salvemini and George La Piana. 295 pages, 1943. A sensible review of the whole Italian question, with sane suggestions.

One World, by Wendell Willkie. 206 pages, 1943. If you won't read more than one book on this subject, read this one.

Economics and Peace, a primer and a program; the primer by Marc A. Rose . . . the program by a group of 34 economists. 63 pages, 1937. A little old, but not out of date. Especially useful for making clear the connection between economics and world politics.

Dumbarton Oaks Conference Proposals for the Establishment of a General International Organization. As submitted by the Dumbarton Oaks Conference, Washington, D. C., October 9, 1944. Fifty copies of this pamphlet have just been received by the College Library and are available at the Reference Desk. (It is interesting to compare these measures with the 1943 recommendations of young Michael Straight in Make This the Last War).

release. After 28 years I felt it was coming to me.

"But the job has been a major factor in my life. It's been a great social satisfaction to me. I've gotten more out of it than I put in."

Upon being informed of the resignation of Law, Gilchrist said, "Texas A. & M. college has lost the services of a man whose entire life has been wrapped up in this institution."

"Mr. Law has been extremely helpful to me both during my tenure as dean of engineering and president. The progress of Texas A. & M. during Mr. Law's tenure has been such as to prove the value to the state and to the institution of participation of a successful business man in its affairs."

Gilchrist added: "He will be missed by his host of friends at the college but this loss is tempered somewhat by Mr. Law's promise to maintain his intense interest in the institution, to visit us often, and give counsel and advice whenever it might be needed."

Harrison, the new appointee graduated in animal husbandry and served as a county agent for some time. Harrison does not succeed Law as president as the board members always choose their presiding officer.

Aggies, Longhorns, and Rice Picked

This writer took a new lease on life last week when he guessed four out of five games, missing only the Rice-Texas tilt. I might add that I didn't feel at all bad about the outcome of that game and am willing to miss one like that every now and then.

So it is with a new outlook that I attempt to pick the winners for this Saturday. There are two conference games on the card, the other two conference members taking on outside opposition.

A. & M. over Arkansas—The Aggies have a better team than they showed against TCU in their only other conference outing. Arkansas has a big team and are dangerous, but if the Cadets play the brand of ball they are capable of playing they should win.

"Jarrin John" Returns

When any sports fan thinks of football in connection with Texas A. & M., he usually thinks of John Kimbrough. Mr. Football himself returned to the campus this week and proved that his name still carries dynamite.

All eyes in the mess hall were focused on him during the evening meal Monday and the Aggies crowded around his table to meet and shake hands with the immortal fullback of A. & M. John was just

Navy Troubles

Three Southwest Conference schools were hard hit by Navy transfers and examinations during the past week. Rice lost Buck Sheffield and Joe Howard, two of their most dependable players, but they gained eight more men. None of the eight new men are expected to be outstanding gridders, however.

At T.C.U., Coach Dutch Meyer suffered a repetition of the 1943 season when he found himself with only five starters from the early season team. However, Meyer was a little better prepared for these transfers this year than he was last fall.

Over at the forty acres, Coach Dana Bible has lost five of his men. Phil Bolin, regular guard has been transferred, while Conda Kegans, Al Martin, Paul Simpson, and Truett Peachey did not come up to the scholastic standards.

TEXAS over S. M. U. — This game may be closer than most people expect, however the Longhorns should win. If Layne, Pyle, and Fischer miss the game as the papers indicate, the Mustangs could easily win.

RICE over Texas Tech.—Rice seems to have the top team in the Southwest at the present writing, and unless the Raiders have come a long way since the early part of the season the Owls should win.

T.C.U. over Chatham Field. — The Frogs have been weakened recently but they still rate the edge over this Service outfit.

the agricultural committee, and Beaty acted as secretary.

The meeting was addressed by President Gibb Gilchrist of Texas A. & M. College who, until recently, had been chairman of the Postwar Economic Planning Commission. President Gilchrist resigned his chairmanship of the Commission on account of pressure of other duties and has been succeeded by A. P. Rollins, Sr., of Dallas.

President Gilchrist told the meeting that one of the first objectives set down by the Postwar Economic Planning Commission related to agriculture and called for stimulated "production of agricultural, forest and livestock products and the potential use of manpower in that field, including the development of processing industries for agricultural and other raw materials and products."

Some 30 representatives of farming and ranching organizations, and State and Federal agricultural agencies took turns giving their views on the major problems that will confront the industry after war's end. In several instances suggested methods of handling these problems were enumerated. All this data will be at the disposal of the seven-man committee appointed by V. C. Marshall at the close of the all-day discussion.
