INDUSTRY

(Continued From Page 1) markets at fair prices." He pointed out that industry and agriculture are closely linked together in the matter of national welfare because in order for farmers to find a market for their constantly increasing production, industry must be able to maintain production and employment.

Wickard emphasized that the tremendous agricultural demand for goods now unobtainable because of war shortages would provide the stimulus for postwar industrial production. He stressed particularly the replacement of farm machinery which has worn out during the present emergency then added that great new fields of farmer consumption are as yet untapped in the fields of rural electrification and refrigeration for farm units.

Wickard indicated strongly that in order to maintain agricultural standards of living the government would maintain price supports for at least two years after the war and conduct a long range adjustment program to shift farm production into line with peace time requirements.

Two Day Conference

The Farm and Industry Conference began Thursday morning with registration in the lobby of the Y.M.C.A. and ended Friday afternoon with a conducted tour of general and specific points on the A. & M. campus. Approximately 250 leaders of agriculture and industry met in a series of conferences during the two day convention to discuss current problems of industry and agriculture and the interrelationship of the two.

In commenting on the conference Dean E. J. Kyle, Dean of the A. & M. School of Agriculture, said, "The meeting has been very successful in accomplishing a meeting of the minds between industry and agriculture. Attendance was the finest we could have hoped for."

Conference Keynote

Dean Kyle keynoted the conference Thursday with his talk on "Current Problems Facing Agriculture." Pointing out that the present war has brought untold sacrifice of human life, destruction of property, and disorganization of normal business Dean Kyle said, "Since history, presenting centuries of evidence, gives us this solemn warning, it seems to me it is our duty to do everything within our power to prevent this post-war disorganization that might be in its final effects more blighting than the war itself, from again sweeping this earth, and especially this country, at the close of this tragic conflict."

Summarizing the problems concerned with wheat, cotton, tobacco, corn-hog products, peanuts and soybeans, and beef cattle production Dean Kyle concluded that after the war farm production would be geared to 30% above peacetime demand. As a solution to this Kyle said that there were only two outlets, domestic consumption and foreign markets.

Kyle expressed the opinion of the majority of national planners an army sergeant who with his crew is lost with their tank in the Sahara Desert. They capture a German column moving into the American lines and as a whole, make plenty of excitement.

The Lowdown: A good picture. It's not Bogart's latest, but really worth seeing.

when he said that farm surpluses could be best taken care of through increased national consumption brought about by full industrial employment. To accomplish a large volume of foreign trade Kyle remarked that world economic and political security must be guaranteed.

"What this country sorely needs and will never reach its greatest prosperity without is a carefully selected group of intelligent and well trained world traders in agriculture who know their own people and their economy and peoples and the economy of all other lands," was the gist of problems facing agriculture and industry as presented by Dean Kyle.

Speaking for Industry

R. K. Longino, president of Longino and Collins, Inc., New Orleans, made a companion speech to that of Secretary Wickard at the banquet Thursday night. He underlined the statements of others that prosperity depends largely upon full industrial employment after the war.

Leadership has combined the methods of carrying the problems of agriculture and industry was the topic stressed in a discussion by D. B. Harris, treasurer of the Humble Oil and Refining Company. Foremost sponsor of and host to the Farm and Industry Conference was A. & M. College, which was ably assisted by the Committee on Cooperation with Agriculture of the National Association of Manufacturers and chambers of commerce from all of the major Texas cities.

and in charge of its meats laboratory. In his letter of resignation to Dean Kyle, Dr. Miller expressed regret in "leaving my associates and good friends here and assure you that I have enjoyed my work and the opportunities it has given me."

Dr. Miller cited the advantages of "the opportunity to combine station work with college work, plus the prospect of organizing a department (of Animal Husbandry) in line with my own ideas" as the principal reason for accepting the Tennessee connection.

"The Texas A. & M. College accepts Dr. Miller's resignation with deep regrets as we consider him an able, well trained and efficient teacher and administrator," Dean Kyle said. "He is one of the best posted men on the sheep and goat industry we have in the entire country."

"Dr. Miller has rendered especially valuable service to the Texas A. & M. College in the administration of the Animal Husbandry Department in these trying times, including the operation of the meat processing plant which handles all local killed livestock for Brazos county, including the Bryan Army Air Field," Dean Kyle added.

A native of Missouri, Dr. Miller received his B. A., M. A. and Ph. D. degrees from the University of that state.

GRADES

"It is possible, depending on the number of deficient students, that the deans will be able to complete their interviews before the Thanksgiving, but in the event that they do not, action on appeals to the Executive Committee will be taken immediately after the resumption of class work after the holidays."

Cooperation in making grade reports promptly and accurately was asked if the faculty and profs were requested to make it a point to see that all men attending their classes had class cards. The circular stated that if the professor would send any student who did not have a card to the office, the registrar would be glad to make one out for him immediately.

Instructors should report all absences from class, including those authorized or excused, said the notice, not just cuts. It was asked that all passing grades be noted in letters of the alphabet, and those below 70 numerically.

According to the notice, grades must be turned in for all students, including graduates. The class cards will be returned to the professors in the same order that they are sent in, which will usually be by sections. Instructors were asked to place the grade in the upper right hand corner of the card in the space labeled "Grade to Dec. 1."

Last Minute Stuff

AT THE LAST MINUTE two flat Aggies tried a roll with the dice. They rolled them real nice and with such beautiful results, a trip to Rice.

These two lads were starved. Their favorite dish was rice with owl, baked and carved. The owl was so tough that the Aggies had to get rough. The feathers flew and the crowd that they drew was enough to delight a good Aggies sight. The game won and over 2000 Aggies sampled the clover of Houston's charms so sweet as all night the cadets chanted, "The Owls got Beat."

Noted Aggie Spirit

NOT LONG AGO several students at L. S. U. were asked by the Reveille, L. S. U. student newspaper, what was their definition of school spirit. One reply was, "I couldn't tell you. All I know is that it's something L. S. U. doesn't have. Texas A. & M. has about the best school spirit of any in the country." Another was, "Do you have to come to me? It's something like the Aggie have."
