

Aggies Play McCloskey Tonight; Texas Here Tuesday Night

Ags To Be Seeking Revenge For Loss In Initial Tilt; Several Players Lost

Basketball Coach Manning Smith's maroon and white charges journey to Temple tonight to play the McCloskey General Hospital five a return games on their home court.

The Aggies came out on the short end of the score in the initial meeting between the two teams played here at DeWare Field House last Thursday night by a score of 46 to 33.

The Aggies hopes have been severely jolted by the loss of several first string squadmen who left school recently for the armed forces. Among those leaving were Milton Cherno, forward; Cotton Howell, guard; Kenneth Abrams, forward; and Jimmy Parmer and Don Nicholas.

Coach Smith held his last practice session prior to the game

Charlie Wienbaum and Bill McCormick at the guard slots. Smith will take two full teams in all to McCloskey tonight and his second five includes Collins and Fincannon at forwards, Hall and Boss at guards, and Homeyer at center.

Next Tuesday night the Ags open their second half play as they play hosts to Bully Gilstrap's Texas u. Longhorns here on the local court. If the maroon and white can stop the steers they'll have a good chance of finishing fifth in the circuit. Any kind of an Aggie-Longhorn sports contest is always

INTRAMURALS

By R. L. Bynes

All-College Intramural Teams Are Chosen by Student Game Officials

Here are the All-College Intramural teams as picked by the intramural officials. These teams were picked at the request of the Battalion, and they are the opinion of those men who have the best opportunity to see all the players in action. Of course, these are just opinions, and you may not agree with them, but here goes:

Turkey Brooding Now In Progress

Hatcheries began turning on the heat last month to begin the life cycle of the turkey from the egg to the holiday market. Ted Martin, poultryman for the A. and M. College Extension Service, believes that since the poult influences the quality of the mature bird good care in infancy brings more money to the grower from the consumer.

As the first step in a successful program he recommends starting brooders at least 24 hours before the poults arrive in order to check brooders and regulate the heat. Place a thermometer about three inches above the floor and eight or 10 inches from the edge of the hover. Begin with a temperature of 90 to 95 degrees and supply plenty of fresh air, but avoid floor draft. After the first week reduce
