

SHORT COURSE ENDS

A group of county agents and agricultural technicians became the first men to finish an artificial insemination short course which was instituted last week by the Dairy Husbandry Department of Texas A. & M. College. Prof. A. L. Darnell, acting head of the Dairy Husbandry Department, stated that this was the first course of this nature to be offered by his department, however, several men had received individual instruction in artificial insemination work previously. The student body of this first short course consisted of representatives of organizations which were already formed and desiring information of this nature. They will return to their respective organizations and instruct in artificial breeding classes of their own. The first such series of classes is already underway in Cooke County at Muenster, Texas. This initial group was especially trained to act as teachers.

dairy cattle, but that the general principles of the course were the same for all classes of livestock. He also added that he hoped the student body of such a course could be broadened in the future to include breeders, farmers, and other agricultural workers and that the course would become an annual event. There is widespread interest in this type of work by all men connected with livestock in any way.

Darnell To Serve As Dairy Supt.

Prof. A. L. Darnell, acting head of the Dairy Husbandry Department of Texas A. & M. College, will again serve as superintendent of the dairy division of the Fort Worth Livestock Exposition to be held in that city March 9-18. Entries for this division of the Fort Worth show will total from 225 to 250 animals according to an advance estimate made by Mr. Darnell. Dr. W. W. Yapp of the University of Illinois staff is acting as judge for the dairy division this year. The dairy cows will be located with the remainder of the livestock show in the Will Rogers Coliseum. Professor Darnell is leaving for Fort Worth today and will be absent from the campus for ten days while acting in the capacity of dairy superintendent.

Of the trees planted by George Washington at Mount Vernon, forty-five are still standing.

Prof. Williams To Speak to AAUP

To Speak On Project For Statewide System

Professor E. L. Williams, Head of the Department of Industrial Education, will talk on A. & M.'s project for a statewide postwar vocational training system at the meeting of the Texas A. & M. Chapter of the American Association of University Professors Thursday night, March 8, at 8:00 in the YMCA Assembly room.

Under consideration is a plan to establish two year vocational schools located at various centers over the state. The object of these schools would be to train technicians in agriculture, engineering and related fields.

At the close of the meeting, the local chapter of the AAUP will hold an important business session to announce the results of the chapter's recent vote on council members of the national organization, and to discuss the General Secretary Himstead's revised questionnaire on universal military training.

 the last game. When the dust had finally cleared, it showed that G Battery held a close victory over C Company, and A Company had edged out Dorm No. 6.

G Battery finally put their contest on ice with Bill Withers' ringer in the last game, backed by a large and loyal section of Battery-men, Withers won the contest on his last throw. Bill pitches his horseshoes in a very unorthodox way, but he can put the hook around the pole, and that is what counts.

The contest in which Collins and Bleyl of C Company and Oliver and Garrison of G Battery participated was attracting most of the attention at first because of the evenly matched and tense games. Oliver and Garrison took the first game, when Collins and Bleyl came back to match it. Collins and Bleyl put on the steam in the final game to pull their victory out of the fire.

 "Combat America" relates the most sustained, exciting and deadly aerial battles yet to come from the cameras of the U. S. armed forces. Shot in color through the fighting ports and bomb bays of the B-17's on their early devastating raids over Germany and occupied France, the hour-long documentary pulls no punches, showing American casualties as well as those of the Luftwaffe, then still in its full effectiveness.

The picture is the one assembled and edited by Major Clark Gable from combat footage secured by the U. S. Eighth Air Force, and specifically from the continental runs of the 151st Bombardment Group out of England. Gable also acts as the narrator, and is shown several times on the field interviewing pilots and crews as director of a Combat Camera Crew.

Action in battle is terrific and suspense will hold any audience breathless with anxiety. Many B-17's are shown as battle casualties, as well as innumerable kills of German fighters by Yank gunners. Main action is the record of the 151st Bomber Group over a target in Germany to which they win through 200 Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfs.

The combat film was obtained by Major Gable, Capt. McIntyre and M/Sgt. Boles on bombing missions, and they completed the film for release here on assignments to the 18th AAF Base Unit. A special invitation has been extended students and faculties of Consolidated High School and Stephen F. Austin High School, Bryan to attend the showings.

not to be covered the next pitch.

The last game was probably the most exciting because the previous victories of their respective teams hinged entirely on the outcome of this game. Keith and Mahone of A Company, and Stanford and Ross of No. 6 were the men this final pressure was put on. After splitting a game apiece, and the score of the final game being tied 16-16, the heat of the tension was terrific.

Keith then pitched one that took a lot of bickering to decide it was not a ringer. His next pitch, however, left no doubt with any of the spectators that A Company had won the tight match. His last pitch was as pretty a ringer as could be thrown.

Thus far, more interest has been shown in horseshoes than was expected but the backing of the different outfits can still improve. The horseshoes champion receives as many points toward the intramural pennant as the winner of any other intramural sport and it shouldn't be regarded too lightly.

 Being considered at the present moment is a Senior Ring Dance for the new seniors on May 11. A proposal has been made that the Ring Committee allow those Seniors classifying at the end of this semester be given their rings two weeks ahead of time in order that they could attend such a dance. Most of the seniors are not supposed to be classified until the end of this semester and unless such a plan was carried through it would be impossible for them to attend the Ring Dance.

Also carded for this semester is a dance on April 20, the night before the Aggie Muster. A Class Night program to be held in Guion Hall in conjunction with the Revueille Fund Drive will precede the dance.

Present at the Student Activities meeting were Joe Skiles, manager of Student Activities; Dough Rollins, director of Student Welfare; G. B. Wilcox, director of Student Personnel; Ernest Langford, Dan Hightower, manager of Town Hall; Dick Goad, editor of the Battalion; Dan McGurk, president of the Senior class, and Jere Higgs, social secretary of the Senior class.
