Man, Your Manners

By I. Sherwood

Wrong Number Etiquette: No body likes a wrong number, but it is important for the one receiving the wrong number to be polite, just as it is important for the one making the mistake to make an apology.

When you are called by mistake the best way to correct it quickly is to identify yourself as soon as possible. A good way to do this is to use a reply such as the following: 'I'm sorry but this is Temple 4965, or 'I beg your pardon, but this is not 4001.'

The best way to answer or call on the telephone any time to identify yourself by saying your name plus that of your office or office or home number plus your name.

Examples:
'Business Office, Chester Brown speaking'; '4965, Mr. Hill speaking'; '4965, Ralph Hill speaking.'

When calling a woman socially, a man would say, 'Ralph Hill speaking', but on business he would say, 'Mr. Hill speaking.'

If you fail to identify yourself when you answer a telephone call, you may expect to hear such as this, 'Who's speaking?' Not wishing to be rude too, you would say, 'To whom did you wish to speak, please?'

When calling your girl at her home and someone else answers, you should announce your name then ask pleasantly for her.

Example:
'Robert Brown, calling Elizabeth, please,' or if her father or mother answers you would say, 'Mr. or Mrs. Bates, this is Robert Brown calling, may I speak to Elizabeth, please?'

All students who wish part-time employment during the Spring term (February 4 to May 25) are urged to file an application renewal with the Placement Office immediately.

Those students who have not filed applications but desire employment should file with us an application at this time. Renewals and applications will be accepted beginning Friday, Jan. 18, 1946.

The Placement Office.

Dramatic Club to Be Re-Organized Tuesday Night

Next Tuesday night in the Assembly Hall, an organizational meeting will be held for the purpose of starting a dramatic club at A. & M. All cadets, veterans and wives, employees and wives, and faculty and wives are invited to attend. The first meeting will consist of the election of officers and appointing of certain committees. There will also be a reading of the play 'The Green Pastures'.

Tentative plans call for the club to give two major three-act plays, which are 'You Can't Take It With You', by Hart and Kaufman, March 15-16; and 'Major Barbara', by Bernard Shaw, to be given later in the year.

At all regular meetings, a number of three-act plays will be read, and general talks on the theater will be given by competent speakers.

Students interested in the work may gain training in these various fields: directing, acting, publicity, finance, make-up, stage construction, scene painting, lighting, and other allied fields.

The Student Council will back the club until it will be able to finance itself.

Carlton W. Adams Arrives Here

Carlton W. Adams of San Antonio, recently employed as architect for Texas A&M College, arrived on the campus this week and reported for duty. He was in conference with T. R. Spence, who is in charge of the college construction program.

For the present, Adams will devote his energies to closing out prior commitments and only a portion of his time will be given to the college. As these prior commitments are finished, he will devote more and more time to the college until he is able to serve on a full time basis.

The construction program of A&M has two aims at present. The first is to bring the present plant to a peak of perfection and the second is the erection of a memorial union building. In connection with the latter project, Adams will make a survey of union buildings at colleges and universities over the nation before drawing up plans for the A&M building, which will be the latest in such buildings.

Called to the service in June, 1941, he served with distinction in an airborne division, earning the Bronze Star and five campaign stars. He is married and has two children—an Aggie aged eight, and a little girl of four.
