

Man, Your Manners

By I. Sherwood

What is the difference between convention and etiquette?"

Ans: (a) Convention is the custom of a locality established by people who live there, to meet the needs of that particular locality. The agreement is made by general consent and due to its appropriateness and expediency is practiced by all.

(b) Etiquette is a set of rules for proper conduct observed by polite society the world over; it is based on kindness and consideration for the other person. Conventions may change with the times, but the basic rules of good manners do not.

"What is the proper way to introduce an in-law?"

Ans: Most people dislike the word in-law regardless of their affection for an in-law. The better way to avoid using the name in-law in introductions is to say: "Mrs. Shelby, this is my wife's mother," or, "Mrs. Shelby, this is my son's wife, Mary." Relatives are introduced in the same way. The status of relationship follows the name: Example: "Mrs. James, this is my uncle, Mr. Morgan. Uncle Bill is from Houston."

"When twelve or more people are in a room, is it necessary to introduce a guest to them one at a time?"

Ans: To a number less than twelve, individual introductions should be made, but over this number the guest is introduced to a few and converses with any one during the evening. The roof of a man's house is an introduction to his friends.

Aggie Grad Gets Ph. D. From War Job

"War sometimes gets people jobs, or a wife or a home," reports the Jan. 27 issue of the Houston Chronicle, "but Dr. Samuel R. McCluney got himself a Ph. D. degree."

The article describes how McCluney, as a lieutenant-colonel in the U. S. Army, was placed in charge of the first Office of Production Control, charged with the distribution control of critical materials to manufacturers. His report on the office was accepted in lieu of a thesis by the National College, Toronto, Canada and along with the awarding of the Ph. D. degree came the honorary LL. D. degree from the Canadian Therapeutic Society.

Dr. McCluney received his B. S. degree in Industrial Education in 1932 and his M. S. degree in Industrial Education in 1937, both at Texas A. & M.
