

Aggies Lose to Baylor in Extra Period

Lead Changes Seventeen Times, Score Is Tied Six Times in Hectic Fray

By Marion Pugh

A fighting Texas Aggie five lost a heartbreaker in an overtime period last night to the smoothly operating Baylor Bears of Waco. The score was 54-48.

It was the type of game that will throw plenty of business to the tailor and the druggist—the tailor will get rich repairing pants seats frazzled by the Aggie fans' twisting to get the "English" on the round ball to get it through the hoop, while the druggist probably did a landslide business in the nerve medicine department. The score in this hectic melee was tied six times, and the lead changed hands seventeen times.

The first half was outstanding on account of the many shots missed. The Aggies were passing the ball like the man in "The Lost Weekend", but stayed in the ball game through superior hustle and Jamie Dawson's ability to cash in on free shots. Little Jackie Robinson put the Bears ahead at the half-time period with a two-pointer which gave the Bruins an 18-16 lead.

But thirty seconds seconds after the go whistle for the second half, Homer Adams, who played an outstanding game all the way, tied up the score on a long shot, and from there on it looked as if the Aggies might upset the dope bucket. With 13 minutes to go, Bill Yeoman rang the bell for two and the Aggies went out in front 32-31. The lead jumped from the Aggies to the Bears to a tie, until with 1½ minutes to go the Cadets found themselves in front 46-42. At this time Bill Yeoman, who had played his usual hustling game, fouled out. With one minute to play, Dawson was fouled, and the Aggies chose to take the free throw instead of taking the ball out of bounds. The second guessers were having a field day on this point this morning, but it is very doubtful if the Aggie cagers could have held the ball for that entire minute. As it was, some ten or eleven shots were made at the baskets during the closing seconds.

Anyhow, the Baylor boys got hot and tied up the count with a field goal and a penalty toss in the last 25 seconds. Hailey, Shearin, and Robinson sacked up the contest in the overtime period with two points each.

For Baylor, little Jackie Robinson was outstanding, leading the scoring with 22 points and looking smooth as silk on the floor. Edwards, who did a good job of staying on Dawson's back, and Belew each garnered 8 for the Bruins, while Hailey also played a good game for the Bears.

Jamie Dawson led the Aggies with 16 points, and Bill Yeoman was good for 11. Homer Adams played a nice, steady game all the way and was good for 10 points.
