

A&M Has Sole ASTRP Program For U. S. Army

The Army Specialized Training Reserve Program, now in process of being closed out, will be concentrated solely at Texas A. & M. College beginning May 6, it was announced today by Virgil B. Faires, in charge of the local ASTRP program.

Seventy-five advanced ASTRP students from colleges all over the nation are expected to arrive in time for a new term to begin May 6, Faires said, and will join the 50 men now in training here.

The students, all under 18, are members of the Enlisted Reserve corps, and are placed on active duty with the army when they reach their eighteenth birthday, he said.

PENNY'S SERENADE

By W. L. Penberthy

Our family has gotten a tremendous kick out of a visit from my aged mother and a sister who live in Ohio. We have been particularly interested in their reaction to different things. Although they are very much impressed by the beauty of the Texas wild flowers and our campus, the thing that impresses them most is the friendliness and the warm hospitality of the fine folks they have met since they arrived.

We live awfully close together here at A. & M. and get to know each other mighty well, and without realizing it makes some very near and dear friends. However, I don't think we realize how dear they are until something a little unusual happens to give them an opportunity to show their friendship. A number of times I have heard people who had experienced some good fortune or sorrow remark, "I just didn't realize I had so many friends". I feel that our happiness is in direct proportion to the friends we have because no worldly goods can compete with friends in giving us the real pleasure of life.

The love of friends for each other is the foundation of the "Aggie Muster". It was this love that brought our men together during the War under very adverse conditions. It is this same love for their friends and a fine institution that fosters such friendship that makes our gathering this week such a fine thing and an occasion we will all long remember.

A&M Seeks Army Help in Study of Gulf Disturbances

Texas A. & M. College, which is going ahead with plans for studying weather disturbances in the Gulf of Mexico in conjunction with the University of Florida, is hoping to obtain a research project along the same lines from the War Department New Development laboratory, it was revealed today by M. C. Hughes, head of the electrical engineering department.

On a recent visit to Washington, Hughes sat in on a conference with the head of the U. S. Weather bureau and the army and navy weather chiefs, and learned that plans are being made to disseminate all weather information gathered by these services to Gulf coast industries, in order that the latter may have ample warning of approaching storms.

Meanwhile, a weather station is in operation here, locating and tracking Gulf disturbances, and another will be established soon in the Freeport area. Information gathered is correlated with that obtained at the University of Florida's stations.

BROCK NAMED TRUSTEE FOR FINE ARTS GROUP

Gene H. Brock, assistant professor of engineering drawing at Texas A. & M. College and an amateur artist of repute, has been named a trustee of the Texas State Fine Arts association, it was announced today.

The association, which has headquarters at the Elizabeth Ney museum at Austin, is active in the promotion of art through its State Art association.

We Still Remember

NO, AGGIES, we haven't forgotten Reveille. The plans for her monument, to be erected over her grave at the entrance to Kyle Field, are in the hands of the designer. We hope that the memorial will be completed by the time the 1946 football season rolls around. In the meantime, she is enshrined in our memories, as in yours.

WILLIAMS TO TEACH AT COLO. TRADE SCHOOL

E. L. Williams, director of the Texas A. & M. College Industrial Extension Service, will be a member of the visiting faculty at a trade and industrial course to be held July 22-August 16 at Colorado A. & M. College, located at Fort Collins, Colo.

Williams will instruct 2 courses in part-time cooperative training,
