siderable sum was raised and it helped very much."

Liao was superintendent of a Chinese school in Manila when the war began, and although his teaching contract was for only two years, at which time he planned to return to the States, he was in Manila when the Japs first attacked the city. In the company of about 40 other Chinese scholars and diplomats, he took to the Philippine hills, where for three years he applied his Horticultural training by growing vegetables for the little band. Prior to Manila's liberation, the group filtered back into Manila, and although a Chinese collaborator insisted that he begin a Chinese school again in Manila, he refused then moved. He would have been killed for refusing had he been caught again.

In 1941, Liao had married in Manila and his first child, a baby girl, was born in the midst of the fight for the city. A boy was born as the Japanese burned Manila just before its liberation, and in memory of the flaming city, the baby was named Kwang Tien, or "Flaming Sky". Mrs. Liao and the children are still in Manila awaiting passport arrangements. Liao will return there upon graduation.

A&M Judging Team To Attend Chicago Meet November 30

The A. & M. Judging Team, members of which will be chosen early next week, will participate in the International Livestock Judging Contest, to be held November 30 in Chicago, announced Assistant Coach Charlie Love. All major agricultural colleges of the nation will be represented in the contest, in which the teams will judge beef cattle, draft horses, sheep, and swine.

Consisting of five members and one alternate, the team, accompanied by Charlie Love and F. I. Dahlberg, head of the Animal Husbandry department, will leave November 21.

Traveling by automobile, the team will make several stops enroute and will do practice judging at the following places: Mrs. Aimee Wilson's sheep ranch at Plano, Texas; Oklahoma A. & M. College; Sni-A-Bar Ranch, Grain Valley, Missouri; Smith's horse farm, Chillicothe, Missouri; Smith's Angus ranch, Lee's Summit, Missouri; and Iowa State Agricultural College.

Scheduled to arrive in Chicago November 28, the group will be the guests of the Chicago A. & M. Club on a sight-seeing tour of the city the following day. The Judging Team expects to return to College Station on December 5.

Southwestern AAU Badminton Meet Slated for Dallas

finally got the starting nod.

Well, we've put it off as long as possible—but somewhere in this column, a prediction or two is due. Without further ado, we'll take a rapidly fading T.U. eleven over an already faded T.C.U. squad by a 14 to 0 count; Tulsa over Baylor, 20 to 0 and for the upset of the week (there has to be at least one a week in the SWC), we'll take S.M.U. to conveniently help the Aggies' title hopes by toppling Arkansas, about 10 to 7.

That brings us to Rice—A & M. Any sane man, after looking at the season's records of the two clubs, would be forced to pick Rice. The question is, have the Aggies improved enough of late to warrant disregarding past performances. If you like past performances, take the Owls, 19-7. If you want to bank on the Aggies improvement, as we do, put your dough on the Aggies, about 14-12.
