scale military policy.
Regarding freshman details, and use of the board, Col. Meloy stated it was not up to him to decide about such matters, but that interpretation of the Basic Policy provisions is the President's and the Board of Directors concern.
Meet Gilchrist
Col. Meloy arranged for a meeting of the committee with President Gilchrist at 4:30 Wednesday afternoon. At 5:30, the President arrived from Houston, and summoned the committee to his office, where upon the grievances of the seniors were presented.
Waving aside all minor technicalities, President Gilchrist stated that he was completely behind the Basic Policy, and anticipated no change in it.
He stated that any violations of the Basic Policy would continue to be prosecuted.
He recommended, however, that if the students want the interpretation of the Basic Policy changed, they might appear before the Board of Directors at their next meeting February 28.

The request that Lt. Col. Bennie Zinn, assistant to the commandant, be removed was refused.
Statements of the committee afterward indicated that they were dissatisfied with their reception.
Class Meets Again
The seniors met again Wednesday night in the Assembly Hall to hear the report of the all-day efforts of the committee, and though tempers had calmed somewhat, there was still little conciliatory sentiment.
The class agreed not to resume their responsibilities as cadet officers unless commissions were restored to everyone without discrimination. They would resume military formations for the sake of order, they agreed.
Charles Burton, correspondent for the Dallas News, and Byron Winstead, college publicity director, were invited to the meeting, and were read a lengthy statement embodying the class's objectives, and the results of the senior committee's efforts so far.
Included in this statement was a recommendation for the ouster of President Gilchrist, as well as Lt. Col. Bennie Zinn.
The senior committee was commissioned to revise the Articles of the Cadet Corps, striking objectionable provisions and inserting necessary ones, and to submit the new version at the next meeting.
