of the dumb woman. After a few tense moments a woman appears who cannot speak because she is in a trance induced by a seance that she has attended. Following the characteristics of the superstition, she too loses her life and the ghost of Sir Charles appears. And who did the ghost wreak revenge upon? Oh, but that would spoil the play for you.

The scene that distracts the most from the plot is the entrance of Lady Jasper, played by Coosie Johnson. The girl definitely has talent.

The play is being produced under the direction of Mr. George Dillavou of the English department. J. Howard Davis is the stage manager, Milt Frenkel is in charge of make up, Patty Kirkpatrick is in charge of costumes, and Rene Schroeder is chairman of the props committee. Costumes were obtained from Van Horn and Sons of Philadelphia, and the play is being produced with permission of Samuel French, Inc.

Sure Now, And Are You A Surrealist?

By Mack Nolen

Aspiring artists in the state's public school system are getting their chance to give Picasso and Dali the old elbow. Sears & Roebuck has sponsored a contest for junior and senior high school students whose canvasses will compete in a national contest.

It is too bad that the contest isn't open to grade school talent. Picasso and the school of modern art are in for some stiff embarrassment against only junior and senior high competition. It would save their feelings to think themselves at least as proficient as eight year olds.

The question has been raised whether it is fair to let sixteen year old prowess stand on an even footing with obviously diseased minds. Sixteen-year-olds can turn out art, while limp telephones and nudes resembling faceless clothes trees are all that insanity can show.

Many American critics will doubtlessly praise the cubist efforts because of an Old American custom of lauding what cannot be understood. Mamma and Poppa will know better however.

Hope Stars In New Paramount Picture

"Don't spare the expense," says Paramount Pictures in the recent advertising campaign publicizing Bob Hope's newest picture "My Favorite Brunette." Backed by $600,000 the campaign will cover the country with store displays, newspaper ads, and jingle contests. Twenty-four Chevrolets, 48 Frigidaires, 60 $100 bills, and numerous local prizes will be given away. Paramount has even teamed up with the Pepsodent Company in order to publicize the picture through Hope's weekly broadcasts. Other members in the cast include Dorothy Lamour, Peter Lorre, and Lon Chaney.

Veterans Administration estimated the nation's veteran population of February 1 at 18,227,000, of whom 14,341,000 were World War II veterans.

Premiums collected on National Service Life Insurance are held in trust and invested at 3 percent interest for eventual return in benefits to policyholders or their beneficiaries, Veterans Administration said.
