San Antonio Bright Spot For Aggies This Weekend

By Arthur C. Mann

Barring floods, fires, or cataclysms (we had a flood last year), the whoopin'-n-st spot in the state this week-end will be San Antonio, as thousands of Aggie and Tech football fans move in. Hotel space has been at a premium for weeks and many Aggies are expected to sleep in the lobbies. High point of the activities and reason for most of them is the football game Saturday night at 8 in Alamo Stadium between the Aggies and Texas Tech.

Other noteworthy happenings include a midnight yell practice, a dance, and a meeting of the A&M Board of Directors. Five senior class members will appear before the college Board of Directors when it meets Friday morning at 9. They are: Elmo Livingston, president of the Senior Class; Cadet Colonel Bill Brown; Jimmie Nelson, co-editor of the Battalion; Asa Holleman, head yell leader; and Louie Hardy, Captain of B Battery, Artillery.

These men, as a committee of the Senior Class, are working in the interest of smoother relations between the Corps and the Board of Directors. Friday night in the Auditorium Plaza the Aggies will hold their traditional midnight yell practice. Throngs of Aggies will hold-up traffic for blocks around the Municipal Auditorium while the Twelfth Man urges the other Eleven on.

For pure entertainment, there is the San Antonio A&M Club's dance in the Rose Room of the Gunter Hotel. Starting after the game Saturday night, the dance is expected to have a big turn-out of Aggies and their dates.

The Athletic Department announced Thursday afternoon that 5500 tickets to the football game had been sold here, 3000 student tickets and 2500 reserved seats. Classes at A&M begin Monday morning at the usual time.

Four Diamonds for Brown; Named 'Colonel of Corps'

By J. K. B. Nelson

In a sweeping reorganization of the cadet corps, many officers were raised one notch, and a new top rank created, called "colonel of the corps." The new rank will be indicated by four diamonds, according to Col. Guy S. Meloy, Jr., PMS & T, who announced the reorganization yesterday.

This order was followed by another partially reorganizing the Cadet Corps. Of the four original regiments, one was broken up, and another added.

The fourth regiment was reshuffled with the Veterans Battalion being shifted to the First Regiment, and the Senior Battalion being designated the Headquarters Group and joining the consolidated bands to form the Corps Troops.

The Artillery Battalion was detached from the First Regiment, and designated the Second Regiment. The original Second Regiment consisting of the Air Force and Cavalry Squadrons remained intact as the Third Regiment.

The original Third Regiment consisting of the Engineer and Composite Battalions was also unaffected by the change except for its official designation being changed to the Fourth Regiment.

In addition to the boost in the Corps Commander's rank, all cadet officers serving on the Corps, Regimental, or Battalion staffs were raised one rank. Company officers retained their same rank.

The new corps organization will consist of the Corps Staff, the Corps troops, and four regiments. The Corps Troops will be composed of the Consolidated Bands and a Headquarters Group, consisting of the Senior Companies.

The First Regiment will consist of the Infantry Battalion and the Veteran Battalion.

The Second Regiment will be made up of the First and Second Artillery Battalions.

The Third Regiment will be composed of the Air Force Squadron and the Cavalry Squadron.

The Fourth Regiment will consist of the Engineer Battalion, and the Composite Battalion.

Irish-Texan Horse Trainer Retires

Owen Garrigan, one of Texas' leading horsemen, completed 32 years as stable superintendent for the animal husbandry department. He went on semi-retirement this month. Garrigan was born in Waterford, Ireland, now Erie, in 1882. His father was a buyer of horses for the four provinces of Ireland, and his fore-fathers were disciples of horse flesh. Equine history has been helped to be made in Texas and A & M through Garrigan's interest and love for the animals. Garrigan started his career with horses at the age of 15 when he fitted and trained the Wild Man from Borneo, a great jumper that won the English Grand National in Liverpool in 1897. The little Irishman, who still has his Irish brogue, came to the United States in 1898 to take care of a string of horses for United States Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey of Texas. The Senator was interested in sulky races and was attending a race at Ballalye, Ireland, near Dublin. Senator Bailey saw the Irish lad and asked him to come to Texas and manage his string of horses. Garrigan remained with the Senator for 18 years before coming to A&M. The walls of his office at the horse barns are lined with trophies of horses that won shows over the country. One of his greatest horses was William the Conqueror, who was never defeated in any show ring in the United States. Another horse is Pat Murphy, two-thirds horse and one-third mule, who does almost anything in the book except talk.

Bailey has been appointed as a State Poultry Supervisor in the A&M poultry husbandry department. He worked for two years as student assistant on the college poultry farm at North Texas Agricultural College. After several years in military service, he attended Iowa State College where he majored in poultry husbandry.
