Plots assigned for the fall and winter gardens may be retained for gardens next spring.

Further information may be obtained by calling at the Horticulture department, room 307, Agriculture building before October 4.

Turkey School Planned By Poultry Dept.

Anyone interested in turkeys was invited today by A&M College to attend a two-day turkey grading school September 30-October 1, on the college campus.

The school, sponsored by the college poultry department in cooperation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture, will be held primarily to train official turkey graders for Texas buyers.

E. D. Parnell, A&M poultry husbandry professor who is acting as chairman of arrangements for the school, said the first half day of the short course would be of particular interest to Brazos county breeders and producers. The first session will be held in the campus YMCA chapel. The remainder of the school is scheduled in the Animal Industries Building.

Instructors and speakers on the short course program include J. A. Bybee, C. M. Evans and John A. Hamman, all of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Firms whose turkey graders qualify at the school are entitled to buy and sell birds on USDA grade.

Dr. J. H. Quisenberry, head of the college poultry department, will be among the short course instructors. (See TURKEY on Page 4)

WTAW Workshop Offers Thesians Experience on Air

WTAW Workshop—a radio dramatic group composed of students and other local people—will present a series of classical dramas over the college radio station this fall.

Wally Pierre, assistant manager of WTAW, and Richard Gottlieb, chief announcer, are holding the first meeting of the group Thursday evening at 7:30, October 2, in Studio A, third floor of the Administration Building.

Everyone is eligible for try-outs in this club. Since the programs, sponsored under the auspices of WTAW, will be presented in the interest of public service, anyone from the college campus, Bryan, or vicinity is eligible for auditions. Through try-outs, the applicants will be narrowed down to twenty or twenty-five members, selected on the basis of their radio-dramatic ability.

The club will present only better scripts available. Included in the present list are such dramas as: "Tartuffe" by Moliere, "Pillars of Society" by Ibsen, "She Stoops to Conquer" by Goldsmith and "The Alchemist" by Jonson.

"People who do not desire to act may serve as producers and directors, or may select music to be used."

There will be no dues or fees. All the facilities of the station will be at the disposal of the club for rehearsal and "On the Air" time. Tentative time for present auditions on the radio has been set at Friday afternoons from 4:30 to 5 p.m. Until the club is organized and officers elected, Pierre will serve as counselor and Gottlieb will act as director.

Four Students Will Visit Rotary Good Neighbor Program

Four Latin-American students have been invited to be guests of the Liberty Rotary Club at a Rotary Ann (ladies auxiliary) meeting next Tuesday. Pedro Luis Munoz of Mexico City; Alberto Van Arken, Buenos Aires; Michael Williams from Monterrey; and Enrique Holgin, Ciudad Juarez were chosen to make the trip.

Arrangements for the visit were made by J. J. Woollett, head of the department of modern languages, in cooperation with the Rotary Club's Good Neighbor program. The Rotarians will furnish transportation to Liberty for the men and bring them back to College the next day.

Bond Covering US Property in Use at A & M Increased To $1 Million; Junction Citizens Say 'All Is Ready'

By Charlie Murray

Five A&M seniors appearing before the college Board of Directors Friday afternoon in San Antonio pledged the wholehearted support of the Senior Class to the administration for 1947-48.

Cadet Captain Elmo C. Livingston, president of the Senior Class, acted as spokesman for the group, introducing each of the other four students. Livingston told the directors that the Senior Class had voted unanimously to send them to appear before the betterment of A & M. He declared that this year's Senior Class is "more together, more settled, and more determined to make A&M the school it ought to be. A&M should be the best."

Bill Brown, colonel of the corps, who spoke after Livingston, stated that the corps is behind the commandant. "We have settled down and started to study, and we realize that the Corps is on trial."

Third student representative to speak before the directors was Asa Holleman, head yell leader, who said that "we are trying to improve the conduct of the students." He in turn thanked the Athletic Department for the cooperation extended everyone on the campus.

Cadet Captain Louie M. Hardy, Stafford, spoke next on behalf of Battery D, Artillery. He stated that students are running the school and working for another blue star. Hardy declared that Aggies were trying to better the corps and insure the degree of continuance of the corps.

Fifth student representative was Jimmie Nelson, Battalion co-editor. Nelson said he preferred to look on the brighter side of life, trying to work with the school and officials.

When each of the five student delegates had spoken, John Newton, Beaumont member of the Board of Directors stated, "This is an excellent omen." He also expressed his appreciation to the five students who voluntarily appeared Friday.

"I am particularly impressed with your seriousness and determination to do something for the college," Tyree L. Bell of Dallas stated.

G. R. White, Brady, chairman of the board, said, "I was appointed to the board before you fellows were born. This is quite a different spirit from that shown by most groups which have appeared before us. You are the first group that ever told us what they were going to do. Usually they tell us what to do."

Other members of the board each joined in praising the five senior students for their pledge of working together for a greater A&M.

Dean of Men W. L. Penberthy, who was present at the open meeting, said, "I believe we've got better days ahead."

Building Amendment Question
Since the College Building Amendment of August 23 is now in question, President Gilchrist suggested that "we proceed to prepare one building at each of the four colleges."

In this respect he proposed that plans be drawn up for a Science Building at A&M and at North Texas Agricultural College; a wing to the Science Building at John Tarleton Agricultural College, which would also house the department of agriculture; and the Art Industries Building at Prairie View A&M, since plans for the new Administration Building there are already underway.

Carleton Adams, A&M system architect, said that under present conditions and high prices A&M would receive only $2,000,000 worth from the $5,000,000 in the Building Amendment.

Adams advocated a "feel-out program" whereby one building could be built at each of the four schools. He suggested that "we should be conscious of the money we spend. We should not be drastic, but look at the whole problem."

Obtaining AAA Building
President Gilchrist also proposed that A&M take over the former AAA Building. The large, white building on the northwest corner of the campus was built by the Department of Agriculture in 1942, agreeing to pay the college $25,000 a year for five years, and $18,500 a year for twenty years.

He stated that the contract between the college and the Department of Agriculture could be terminated at any time.

Kyle Field Seating
The board unanimously approved the appropriation of $133,000 for improvements on Kyle Field. These improvements would include additional offices, dressing rooms, and training rooms under the stadium, a new electric scoreboard, and the addition of 6,000 temporary seats for the Thanksgiving Day game.

The electric scoreboard has been installed and should be in operation for the Baylor game on October 25.

The Former Students Association plans to undertake a program to increase the seating capacity for Kyle Field. Under the proposed set-up, each subscriber will pay $50 a seat, which will entitle him to that seat for a certain number of years.

search was amended to include "instruction."

Grants-in-aid Acknowledged

In addition the board acknowledged grants-in-aid from Proctor and Gamble Company for $1,000 and the United States Public Health Service for $1,689 for experimental research to be carried out here.

Five gifts were accepted, including the following:

$1,000 from E. M. "Ted" Denley for the Dallas News Opportunity Award. The winner of this award is Billy O'Neill Hopkins of Irving, Texas, 1947 honor graduate of North Dallas High School. He is enrolled in business and accounting.

$1,000 for "Ems" Dyth Hillel Foundation's Scholarships. These awards by the Refugee Student Service of the Chicago Hill Foundation were given to George Kennedy of Budapest, Hungary and Joseph Sabat of Sofia, Bulgaria. $10,000 (250 per year) on the Cornelia Cooke Smith bequest, establishing a Memorial Award Endowment.

$100 from John C. Van Valkenburg of Dallas; for prizes in competition on landscape design problems among senior students in the department.

$24,000 from Clarence L. Korth bequest, known as "Baby Korth Trust." This money will be invested in government bonds as a permanent memorial endowment, and the income will be used to help Texas boys attend college.

ROTC Bond Increased

The board authorized President Gilchrist to increase the bond of the college covering US Army property in use for military training from $582,735 to a million dollars.

This increase was necessary because the government is now supplying A&M with all of its latest military equipment. Colonel G. S. Meloy Jr., commandant, now estimates the value of equipment now in use at A&M at more than two million dollars, over ninety percent of which has been furnished since
