losing to the Longhorns by but half a point. At the Fat Stock Show meet on the following week the Aggies took the honors. This was the first time Texas had failed to win that meet since its beginning.

Texas won the Corpus Christi Meet but A&M followed only one point behind. A dual meet between Texas A&M and LSU found the Aggies at top strength and A&M took an easy victory. The victory was later repeated over Rice.

At the annual Sports Day classic the tracksters tied Texas University while the baseball team carried the day against Brooke Medical and the Whites swamped the Maroons in a scrimmage to commemorate the end of spring training. Karow's golfers won over Rice in a dual meet also.

Ray Putnam's Aggie mile relay team, composed of Art Harnaden, Ray Holbrook, Bill Papier, and Ervin Bilderback won national recognition by beating all comers. They only lost once.

Baseball was erratic and injuries reduced the pitching staff to as few as two men at times. Stan Hollmig paced Southwest Conference home-run hitters while Cotton Lindloff, Tex. Thornton, and Peck Voss were strong in the batting department. Ambidextrous

Dallas Symphony Orchestra To Make Bryan Appearance Jan. 5

The Dallas Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Antal Dorati will appear in Bryan January 5 to open the Bryan Artist Series for the 1948 season.

With a few years omitted, principally the years of the two World Wars, the orchestra has enjoyed thirty-five active seasons. The 87-piece professional orchestra over which Dorati presides is a far cry from the amateur group gathered together by Hans Kreissig, conductor and pianist, to form the first Dallas Symphony Orchestra.

To assemble the present organization, Dorati auditioned musicians in New York, California, Chicago and Texas. One of the musicians is known to have made his way from Rumania to the United States with the hope of being accepted by the Dallas Symphony.

Tickets for the five programs of the Bryan Artist Series are on sale at George's and the Aggie-land Pharmacy on the campus, and with Mrs. Ann Hilliard at the Student Center, A&M Annex. Student tickets, including veterans' wives, cost $3.50, while non-student tickets sell for $6.

Foremost among the factors contributing to the speedy reorganization of the post-war Dallas orchestra was the reputation of Antal Dorati among musicians. Although previous to 1945, the conductor had never held a permanent post as symphony conductor, he was recognized among musical groups as one of the outstanding leaders of the world. Dorati, an American citizen since last spring, is a native of Budapest and a graduate of the Juilliard School.

Leroy Gibben's, Earl Beasley, and Dewey Jacobs were mainstays on the hurling department.

The 1947 grid season found the Aggies weak at tackle and center positions, and extremely weak in reserve strength. Starting strong, Homer Norton's charges dumped Southwestern and Texas Tech in rapid succession but bowed to Oklahoma for the second consecutive year. LSU proved to be a stumbling block, though the Tigers were forced to come from behind twice before winning. This was a "heart-breaker" for, though the Bengals were rated among the top teams in the nation, the Farmers more than held their own for three quarters.

Opening Conference play against TCU in Fort Worth, the Aggies were heavy favorites but the Frogs were clicking that day and ran up 26 points while

Water Course Led By IE Service

A water works school is being conducted at Port Neches by the Industrial Extension Service of A. & M. in cooperation with the City of Port Neches, the Trinity Neches-Sabine Water and Sewerage Association, and the State Board for Vocational Education.

The classes opened December 1 and will continue through December 19. W. A. Bandy and C. A. Sanders are instructors in charge.

An enrollment of 105 has attended the classes on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays dealing with municipal water. The other two classes on Tuesdays and Thursdays deal with industrial water.

Ivy Towers Lure Prof Back After Adventure on Outside

By R. L. BILLINGSLEY

To anyone whose path of education has wound through the C. E. building, the figure of Bob Mitchell Galloway should be no strange one. Renowned throughout the department for a dry sense of humor and a thorough-going knowledge of what every young engineer should know, he has been catering to young men with slide rules and drawing boards for the past four years.

His birthplace was the city of Kosciusko, Mississippi, a Hamlet, which in his own words, "had more name than population". It was located a few miles off the highway between Jackson and Memphis, however, and this proximity proved to be his undoing. After a one year stint in the Chapel Hill grammar school, the younger Galloway was hustled off to Texas by his father, whose carpenter business summoned him to the Rio Grande Valley town of Mercedes. Here Galloway completed his grammar as well as high school work, and headed North for the Brazos, where he became Fish Galloway and closed quarters with a curriculum in Chem Engineering. Gaining his B.

the hapless Cadets were picking up three yards on the ground.

This left the undefeated Baylor Bears odds-on favorites the following week when they journeyed to College Station. Then, the Aggies started playing football. Quarterback Stan Hollmig gave one of the most miraculous punting exhibitions in the history of football. The Bears were kept back against their own goal posts the entire game while the Cadets blanked them 24-0.

Arkansas came from behind in the last quarter to tie A&M 21-21 after the Aggies had made a two-touchdown deficit and forged ahead of the Porkers. High-flying Southern Methodist came out 18-0 victors while Rice handed the Cadets one of the worst beatings they had suffered in years. The score was 41 to 7.

The annual Turkey-Day classic with Texas proved just as disastrous. The Longhorns took an early lead and held a 12-0 margin at halftime. Immediately following the intermission, the Steers came back strong to chalk up three more tallies.

The Aggies, however, were not through. Trailing five TDs, they went ahead to chalk up 13 points before the game ended.

In basketball this fall, the A&M cagers have enjoyed limited success. Winning the opener from Abilene Christian, they went on to split a two-game series with Southeastern Oklahoma Teachers, lose to East Texas, and trip Sam Houston twice. This leaves them with four wins in six starts.

Vet Wives' Sunday School Class Has Christmas Party

Twenty-three members of the Winsome Sunday School class of the College Station First Baptist Church, composed entirely of veteran's wives, held its annual Christmas party at the home of Mrs. R. L. Brown Tuesday night, December 16.

The party began with the entire group singing Christmas carols. After the carols, slips of paper, containing a Christmas message to be substituted by Christmas songs, were given to each guest.

Mrs. M. Baffield told a Christmas story "Why the Chimes Rang". Mesdames Dallas E. Coldiron, Pat Mann, and Tony Sorensens sang Silent Night. Mrs. Santa Claus arrived after the program bringing presents and gum to everyone. Mrs. Brown presented each member of her class with a picture of Christ.

After the program, the group was served refreshments of punch, open-faced sandwiches, cookies and Christmas candies by hostesses Mesdames J. T. Moss, W. F. Cox, B. R. Myers, Jr., Wanda Pence, P. A. Humble, J. W. Wells, B. M. Legler, and J. M. McLain. To add to the Christmas atmosphere, each guest was given a beautiful Christmas corsage.

McGuire Flies To ASEE Meeting In Detroit, Dec. 25

J. G. McGuire, professor of engineering drawing, will leave by plane December 25 for Detroit, Michigan, where he will attend the mid-winter meeting of the drawing division of American Society for Engineering Education.

The main part of the program will consist of representatives from the automobile industries around Detroit who will speak primarily on graphics as used in the automobile industry. The chairman of the drawing division of the ASEE has asked McGuire to work with him on an advanced graphic project. He will visit the Fisher Body Works and observe the use of the company's making of graphics.

McGuire will serve on the executive committee of ASEE which plans the program and sets the policy for the June meeting to be held at Texas University this year.

He will also attend a committee meeting on visual aids, which is sponsored by the ASEE and make a survey of visual aids used in the United States.

McGuire is in charge of a visual aid survey for Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Utah, Colorado, and California.

Over-Grazed Land Causes Decline In Antelope Numbers

Sheep are too much competition for antelope in the Trans-Pecos country, Helmut K. Buechner, faculty member of the Wildlife Management Department told a special session on wildlife conservation in Austin Saturday.

Buechner has just completed a 15 month study in the Trans-Pecos region of Texas on the causes of the decrease in number of antelope in that area.

The wildlife expert says that there are three reasons for the decrease in number of antelope in this area. The main reason for this is the over-grazed condition of the sheep ranges of West Texas. Weeds which is the chief source of food for the antelope, is also a favorite food for sheep.

Another reason caused from overgrazed ranges is the presence of stomach worms. The overgrazed ranges do not furnish enough food for the antelope, causing malnutrition and a weak condition resulting in stomach worm infection.

In Buechner's study, it was found that on ranges where there were cattle but no sheep, there was plenty of food for antelope.
