Cattle, like human beings, suffer from night blindness if they do not get vitamin "A" in their rations, Paul T. Marion of the A&M Experimental substation at Spur discovered after a test which he began last summer.

Marion said a group of 14 yearling steers, made up of 5 Herefords, Mighty Army' which is currently 5 Jerseys, and 4 crossbreeds, rang-being presented by the Presbyter- ing in weight from 700 to 1,000 tonseed meal and hulls, a ration deficient in vitamin "A", for 84

When green grass, wheat pastures, alfalfa, or other green feeds are available, yearling steers are quirements for as long as 180 days. Fifteen similar steers grazed side by side with the first group all summer, Marion said. In the Marion warns that the recent drouth may have left many cattle throughout the midwest without a reserve of vitamin "A".

"It's easy to check your cattle after dark. The blind ones are usually slow to move and will run into feed troughs or other obstacles. Two to four pounds per sity of Texas; L. F. Kennedy, of days per animal of good quality green alfalfa hay will correct the condition within a short time.'
