Buck Will Edit Veterinarian Mag

Lewis E. Buck, senior veterinary student from George West, Texas, was elected editor of the Southwestern Veterinarian at a recent meeting of the Student Chapter of the AVMA.

Bob Shell of Ardmore, Oklahoma was elected business manager. Shell is also a senior veterinary student.

Buck and Shell will supervise publication of the May issue of the magazine.

A new slate of officers for the Veterinarian will be selected for the 1948-49 school year. The Southwestern Veterinarian will be a semi-monthly publication.

Confectionaries Require Fee Slips for Checks

No checks will be cashed at college confectionaries without the yellow fee slip from the Fiscal Office, the Office of the Student Union-College Confectionaries announced yesterday.

The only exception will be allowed when a person not having his fee slip may obtain the signature of one of his friends as co-signatory, the announcement stated.

Film Available At Visual Aids Lab

"Oil for Tomorrow," a film dealing with oil production, is available at the Photographic and Visual Aids Laboratory for the use of student clubs and organizations, Howard Berry, visual aids director, has announced.

The film deals with oil prospecting, refining, and drilling, Berry said. The 16 mm. film is in color with sound and is thirty minutes long.

No charge will be made for use of the film, Berry said. Those interested may call 4-5867 and reserve the film for a definite time. Berry said the film would be in the Photographic and Visual Aids office until March 31.

— RODEO —

ing, team tying, and calf roping. The six men from A&M entered all events. Stone, Griffith, and Roberts entered the riding events, while Kruse and Wood displayed their skill at roping. Day acted as all-purpose man since he was able to rope or ride.

Every university or college could enter six men in the contest. There was no restriction in the number of events that either a roper or rider could enter. Rules followed at the rodeo were those set forth by the Rodeo Cowboy Association.

Teams who participated last year were from the Universities of Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming, Colorado A&M, New Mexico A&M, Arizona State College, California Polytechnic School and California College of Agriculture. Over four thousand fans watched last year's rodeo.

Intercollegiate rodeos owe at least part of their origin to the Universities of Arizona and of Victorville, California.

Before the intercollegiate rodeos of either the Universities of Arizona or Victorville were organized, college rodeos had a vigorous start at A&M. The first A&M show was held here in 1919. This was not strictly a rodeo. It was called a livestock novelty show and was made up of livestock classes, parades, and riding contests. This event was repeated the following year.

In the fall of 1921, A&M held its first college rodeo, and thus it appears quite evident that this contest antedates all other college rodeos by at least fifteen years. Since that time, rodeos have been held annually at A&M.
