Bell Addresses ASCE On Future Engineer Jobs

Construction offers the greatest field for Civil Engineering graduates, Tyree Bell, Construction Engineer and member of the Board of Directors of A&M said last night at the meeting of the local chapter of the ASCE.

The United States is in the midst of the biggest construction boom ever, and the opportunities for the young engineer in this field are many, Bell said.

He stated that A&M graduate C.E.s have dominated the construction field more than they have dominated any other. At the present time there are more Aggie contractors in Texas than all the graduates of other schools put together.

Bell emphasized the fact that before a student does anything else, he must appraise himself and choose the career he wants. The first thing that should be considered in selecting a job is the character of the employer, and the last thing considered should be the starting salary.

Integrity, loyalty, judgement, ingenuity, ability to appraise values, and technical skill are the things that contractors want in their employees, Bell said.

Bell is President of the Austin Road Company and graduated from A&M in 1912. Since then he has been engaged in construction work except for a brief period following

Soil Erosion Is Serious, State Conservationist Tells Seminar

Now is the time for action in conserving agricultural land, Paul H. Walser, state conservationist, told a range and forestry seminar Monday morning.

Walser, who is visiting on the campus through Wednesday as a guest of the range and forestry department, will hold discussions and lectures concerning soil conservation problems in Texas. He represents the U. S. Soil Conservation Service with headquarters at Temple.

Three-fourths of the top soil is gone from 46 million acres in Texas, Walser emphasized. On another 40 million acres, one-fourth to three-fourths of the top soil has been lost.

All of this damage has occurred in less than 100 years of agricultural use. He told the range and forestry students and faculty members.

"Productive land is indispensable for a nation to grow and improve, Walser said. The seriousness of soil erosion requires immediate action. At present there is not enough productive land in the world to support the population at a healthy nutritional level.

Walser further emphasized that if the United States and Texas are to maintain their agricultural production, efforts to maintain and improve the soil must be rapid, concerted, and effective.

The state conservationist was professor of animal husbandry at A&M for eleven years prior to his work with the Soil Conservation Service.

During his stay here, he plans to discuss the problems of soil erosion and conservation with faculty members and graduate students in the range and forestry department.

He will also interview students majoring in range and forestry who are interested in positions with the Soil Conservation Service.

TCU Stadium to Be Enlarged Into Bowl

FORT WORTH, Tex., April 6 (AP)—Texas Christian University's football stadium will become a bowl with 33,500 permanent seats this summer.

Both end zones will be enclosed up to the ground level, providing room for 8,500 additional fans, athletic director Howard Grubbs announced.

Work on the new sections, which will be of concrete construction, already is under way.

Lights also will be installed. T.C.U. will play three night games here next fall.

the fact that Switzerland must depend on all her men for defense, while we have vast numbers of men from which to take a corps of ready troops.

Whether U.M.T. would produce a nation with militaristic tendencies, such as Russia, Germany and other aggressive nations, was eliminated when Half and Fuller called to mind the definitely unmilitaristic attitude of the majority of veterans.

At the conclusion of the discussion members of the panel agreed that there must be some plan adopted to provide this nation with an adequate force to enable her to pursue her foreign policy. Whether it is Universal Military Training or Universal Security Training would be left to the people to decide.
