ing through September 30, the senior instructor for the organized reserves announced today. The training, which is in addition to the normal monthly training meetings, will be held on seven week-ends spaced throughout the summer and at the home city of the reservists. Reservists participating in these exercises will be placed on temporary duty for the two days over the week-end and receive full pay and allowances for that period, it was stated. They can volunteer for as many of these periods as they desire.

Home station training is also in addition to the summer camp training that is being conducted for reservists at Camp Hood, Fort Bliss, and Fort Sill.
