306 average.
The other two receivers were Bill Dennis and John Billings. Dennis was hampered by a broken finger early in the season and did not see much action until the later stages. Billings had to divide his time between baseball and spring football training and consequently also got off to a slow start.

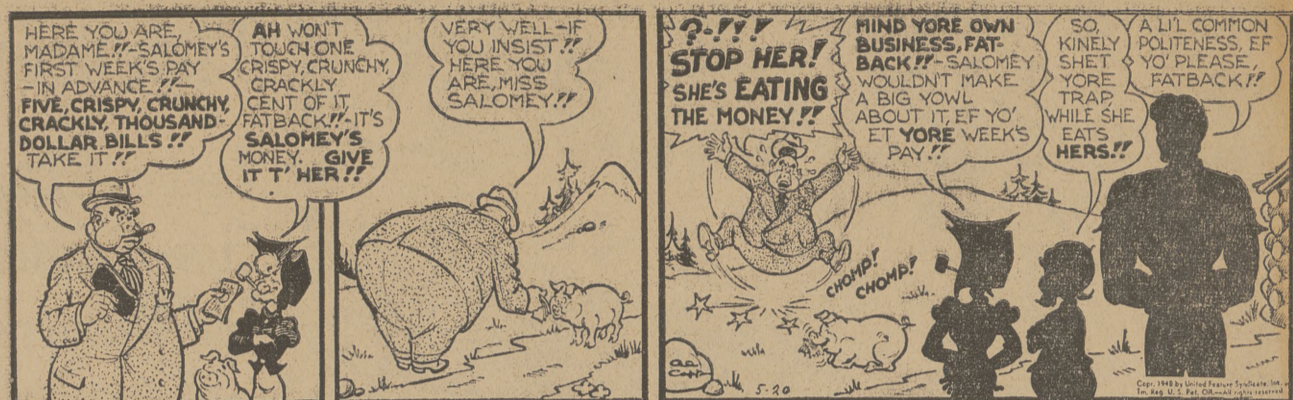

Leading home run hitter for the Freshmen was Blanton Taylor. The centerfielders devoted a lot of his time to spring football and had trouble at the plate in the first few contests. However, the Honda slugger gathered momentum as he went and toward the close of the campaign he was hitting anything he could reach. Taylor batted in a dozen runs with thirteen blows and was hitting .343 at the ball.
The right field spot on the Fish nine was handled by Bill Warriner. Warriner is one of the four Aggie starters who played high school ball under Aggie-ex-Pete Dowling at Houston's Austin high school. And like the other three, Graham, Savarino, and Bollman, he was also consistent at the plate. The outfielder ended his first year of college ball with a percentage mark of .302.
Hollis Baker, Hilmer Scheulke, Bob Fife, and Britt did a good job of backing up the starting outfield trio. Baker and Scheulke both hit safely four times in ten tries.
Behind the fine array of hitters, Coach DeWare had an impressive group of pitchers.
Workhorse of the staff was Pat Hubert who led the twirlers with five wins. One of those victories was the 5-2 win over the Frank Womack and the Texas Shorthorns. Hubert spent forty-nine innings on the hill and had an imposing record of fifty-one strike outs while allowing but twenty hits.
Truett Mobley, a member of last season's freshman basketball team also spent a lot of time on the mound. Mobley was around for thirty-nine frames in scoring three wins.
J. B. McCoy, 29-year-old pitcher from Temple, was the Granddaddy on the freshman squad. He registered fourteen strike outs in the twelve rounds that he toiled on the mound and ended the season with a record of two victories and no losses.
Red Wiggins, who also hit the win column twice, Harold Higgins, who won his only start, and Larry Ludtke complete the pitching corps.

Eads Requested To Report for Duty

Col. R. A. Eads, commanding officer of the 479th Composite Group, Army Organized Reserve, has been advised that a request will be made for him to return to active duty during the summer, according to Captain Albert W. Stockell, instructor.
Eads, who is associate professor of chemistry here, will be assigned to a special technical position in the Chemical Center, Maryland, for the period between June 1 and September 1.
An active member of the staff will be detailed to succeed Eads in command of the reserve group if he accepts the return to active duty, it was stated.
