

Veterinary Conference Hears Address by Boney on Vaccine

Vaccines against Newcastle's disease, a paralysis that often kills flocks of young chicks, may soon be available in Texas, W. A. Boney, Jr., told the Texas conference for Veterinarians recently.

Newcastle's disease has appeared frequently of late in Texas, and recently killed thousands of four-week old chicks in Fort Worth, Boney stated. He warned that the disease could become as dangerous to poultry as hoof-and-mouth is to cattle. However, vaccination of laying hens will make their chicks safe during their early weeks of life.

One hundred and seventy-five veterinarians from Texas were present at the conference.

P. L. Piercy, associate veterinarian, Louisiana State University, told the meeting that new testing methods may help control anaplasmosis, which produces anemia in cattle.

How the United States Public Health Service is fighting rabies was described by E. S. Terkel, officer in charge of the rabies control branch of the Health Service at Montgomery, Alabama.

Hoof-and-mouth disease of cattle, which has been scourging Mexico and frightening Texas cattlemen who remember huge losses years ago, was discussed today by B. T. Simms, chief U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry, Washington, D. C.

E. Y. Smith, Cornell University turkey specialist, emphasized to students taking the poultry short course that turkeys must be free of pollorum, have the ability to live and grow, and be of meat-type if they are to satisfy the buyer.

Smith is one of 20 speakers that have appeared on the three-week short course, which closed Friday. Texas hatcherymen, poultry and turkey breeders made up the class membership.

how she and her husband were on a bug killing campaign by a combination of DDT and trenches around their trailer home. Mrs. Bradshaw was outspoken in her approval of the worthiness of this program.

With the indorsement and assistance of these and other citizens of this area, the entire clean-up campaign should be a complete success. Needed now is a more work and less talk campaign. This will be offered today when the business houses close and the work begins on spraying and painting of houses with insecticides.

Symptoms of poliomyelitis are vague, according to Dr. James Gabbard, College Hospital, but strongly resemble winter influenza. Such signs as fever, headaches, sore throat, and stiff neck should be noted with caution, especially when they are coupled with weakness in the limbs, nausea, or vomiting. Dr. Gabbard stressed that the disease attacks all ages and races alike.

Carmichael stated that entrance into the stadium was to be speeded up by specially designed ramps which would provide easy entry to the new addition of seats. Concessions and toilet facilities were to be provided in the new project.

Carmichael ventured no guess as to when the rest of the seats will be sold. He said that the sale of options would continue indefinitely.
