

Policies Affecting Students Announced by Army, Air Force

Policies affecting enrollment and continuance of students in the senior divisions of the ROTC and the Air ROTC under the provisions of the Selective Service Act of 1948 were announced jointly today by the Departments of the Army and Air Force.

All students falling within the 18 to 26 year age group will have to register with their local boards. Deferment from the draft will be in force until after completion of the normal academic and ROTC course.

The deferment policies will apply to selected ROTC students whether they are entering their freshman year at the beginning of the 1948-49 academic term or are returning to complete their formal education.

To be eligible for deferment until the completion of their academic training, students enrolled in ROTC units must remain in good standing in both their academic and military courses, must show sufficient aptitude in leadership, and must attend a summer training camp.

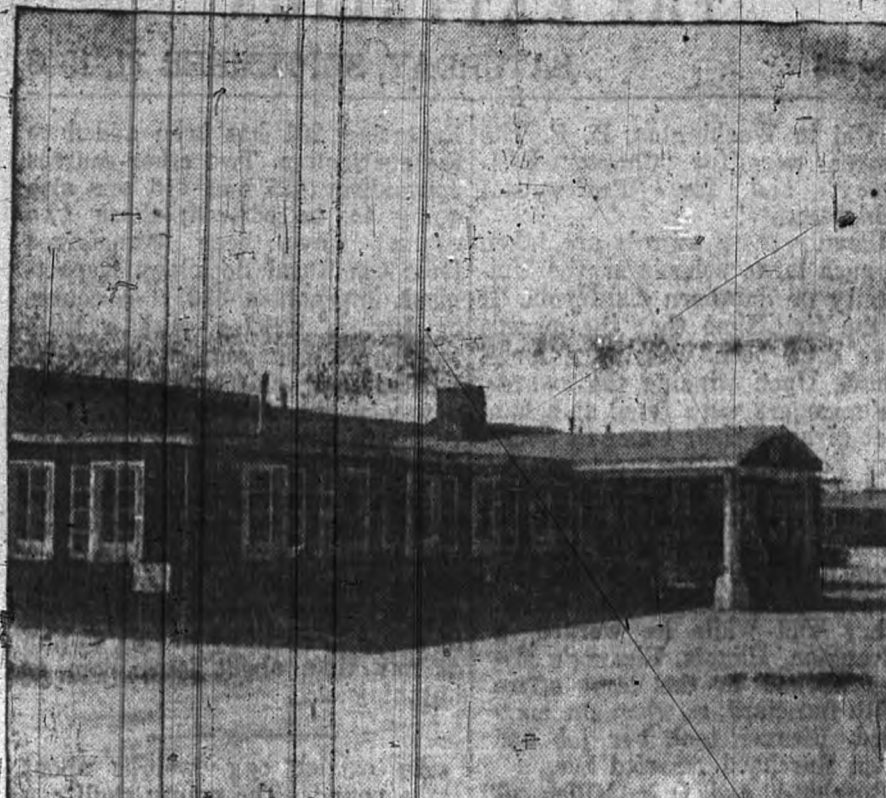

In addition, they are required to sign an agreement to accept a commission in the Army or Air Force and to serve not less than two years on active duty as an officer, subject to a call by the Secretary of the service in which they receive their commission.

Students who had been formally enrolled in the advanced course before June 24, 1948, and who remain in good standing, will automatically be deferred from induction until after completion of the course.

Brigadier General Wendell Westover, Army Executive for Reserve and ROTC affairs, pointed out that this deferment procedure does not allow the non-veteran student, or the veteran of less than ninety days service, any indefinite exemption from his military obligation as set forth in the Selective Service Act.

All students at college level are liable to military service subject to temporary postponements for those who meet ROTC requirements and quotas.

After registration with his local draft board an ROTC student will notify his professor of Military Science and Tactics at the institution he attends of the number of the board and its address.

ANNEX STUDENT CENTER is equipped with pool tables, ping-pong tables and a lounge room. The information office is also located in the Student Center.

Dean Pearson Heads School For Graduates

Graduate students and bovine nutrition are the main interests of Dr. Paul B. Pearson, Dean of the Graduate School, who is also an expert on nutrition for the Agricultural Experiment Station.

Dr. Pearson was born in Oakley, Utah on November 28, 1905. He entered the University of Utah in 1924 and received his Bachelor of Science degree from Brigham Young University in 1928. His first teaching position was in the Ophheim High School, Ophheim, Montana.

In 1930, Pearson left high school teaching to become an instructor in the Animal Husbandry Department of Montana State College. The following year he entered the Graduate School of Iowa State College.

Upon leaving Iowa State, Dr. Pearson was employed by the University of California in animal husbandry research. Several years later he continued this work with the University of Wisconsin, receiving his Ph.D. in the spring of 1937. He joined the A&M Animal Husbandry staff in the fall of that year, and since that time has been the nutritional expert of the Agricultural Experiment Station.
