WALLACETTES POORLY
RECEIVED IN SANTA FE

SANTA FE, N. M., Oct. 25 (AP)—The Wallace party candidates for U. S. Senator and the state executive secretary were received Saturday on 855 bonds pending a habeas corpus hearing Nov. 5.

District Judge David Carmody signed the writ.

Brigit Provenzo of Hurley, nominee for Senator, and Miss Rose Segure were taken in custody by Santa Fe police after an open air rally in a residence section in which a loud speaker was used.

The Wallace group has challenged the city's loud speaker ordinance as unconstitutional.

While officers and a defense attorney argued the status of the detainees, the two spent the night in city police courtroom.

Police, who said the two were cited for disturbances of the peace and breach of peace, kept them carefully locked out of the jail.

Provenzo and Miss Segure, contending they were imprisoned, refused through the night to leave on cash for personal bond.

REUTHER DESCRIBES REPUBLICAN 'STEAL'

DETROIT, Oct. 25 (AP)—CIO United Auto Workers' President Walter P. Reuther Sunday charged the Republican party proposes "the most gigantic steal ever proposed in all history."

In a radio address, (over ABC), Reuther accused the GOP of advocating turning the Tennessee Valley Authority and development of atomic energy over to private business and at the same time planning to give private corporations control of tidelands oil.

He explained he spoke only of campaign issues in the 1948 elections because the radio time was paid for by the UAW and the Taft Hartley law forbids labor unions to buy radio time to endorse candidates.

However, Reuther said he would speak again next Sunday on a program paid for by voluntary contributions and would name the candidates the Auto Workers Union supports.

The UAW chief said previously had voided his personal support of the Truman-Barkley Democratic ticket.

The red-haired union leader, his arm still in a cast from wounds received in an assassination attempt six months ago, declared the GOP seeks to enrich great corporations by turning over to them natural resources.

The UAW president charged, "from their own record it is obvious that the Republicans were more interested in yachts and penthouses for the few rather than food, clothing and shelter for the many."

Student Senate Decides Status
Of 'Corps Sweetheart' Tonight

The Student Senate will meet tonight at 7:30 p. m. in the Assembly Room of the YMCA to decide whether the present "Corps Sweetheart" will be recognized as the "Aggie Sweetheart," Charles Kirkham, president of the Student Senate, said Friday.

Kirkham said the social committee has considered the matter and has submitted the following recommendation:

"The social committee, after a careful consideration of all the facts concerning the selection of a representative from TSCW, has acknowledged that the method of selecting a representative was regrettable and unsatisfactory to the student body as a whole.

It is the opinion of this committee that in the future a more satisfactory method of committee selection be adopted.

In making its recommendation, the social committee has considered the following:

1. The possibility of selecting more than one sweetheart and calling the present selectee "The Corps Favorite" or the "Corps Sweetheart."

2. The selection of another sweetheart would cause confusion to the general public.

3. Possibility of the loss of prestige and the confusion that might result at TSCW from another committee to making a second selection.

Therefore, this committee respectfully recommends to the Student Senate that the selection of the committee of October 3, 1948 be recognized as the "Aggie Sweetheart."

The members of the committee are Bob R. Smith, chairman; Julius G. Blum, secretary; Tommie D. Benefield, James D. Whitley and Aubrey D. Sprawls, committeemen.

Aggie Band Shines Again . . .

Waco Relaxes After Aggies
Treat Bears To Trying Day

By C. C. MUNROE

"Say mister, why are you wearing that uniform?"

"I'm from A&M."

"Do you have to wear it?"

"Yes, everybody in the cadet corps does."

"Are you going to beat Baylor?"

"I hope so."

"Well, don't tell anybody, but I hope so too."

With these words of encouragement, a little too-headed by deeked out in the green and gold of Baylor University threaded his way through a crowd of happy Baylor exes, all of whom were unaware of the traitor in their midst.

The four-foot tall minuter was the only green and gold clad Aggie roofer, but his friendliness was characteristic of the reception thousands of Aggies got when they invaded Waco for the annual Baylor-A&M football game.

With just a few exceptions, among them a farmer hung in effigy at the corner of 5th and Speight streets, the meeting between the two schools was the most amicable since the first A&M-Baylor tilt in 1899.

The thousands who jammed into the small Waco Municipal Stadium to form the biggest crowd in Waco football history forgot all past differences as they watched one of the best games of the day unfold on the gridiron as the Aggies met the Bears.

Only at half-time did the fans pause long enough to rest. Then they were treated to a lineup of Baylor beauties, all contestants for the title, "Queen of the 1948 Homecoming."

The honors went to Miss Joyce Metasa of Houston, whose name was not revealed until just before she stepped from the huge gold and green football to receive a silver crown from J. W. Patterson, president of the Baylor Ex-Students Association and former Baylor All-American.

The queen's court gathered around as the ceremony took place and a huge bouquet of American Beauty roses was presented to Miss Metasa as the climax to the program.

As the queen's court moved off the field, the Aggie band moved on, and proved to Baylor fans what the Aggies already knew—that A&M boasts the best band in the Southwest Conference, if not the best in the nation.

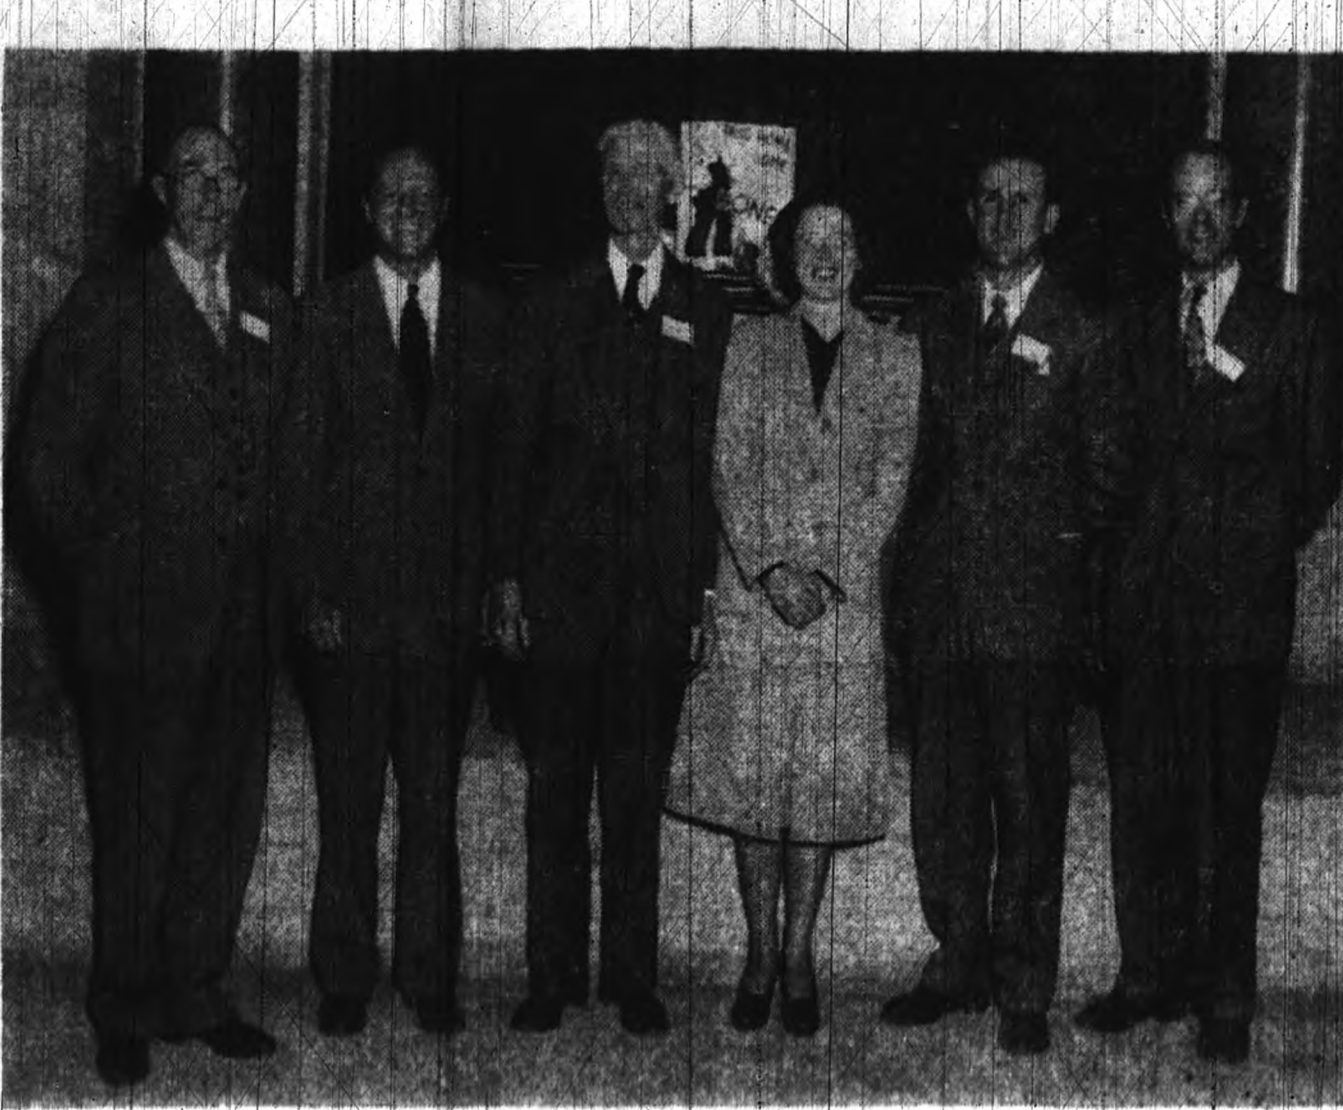

The cadets moved downfield to the tune of the Aggie War Hymn, then counter-marched and returned to midfield. There they formed into huge letters spelling out "BEARS" and melting from this

Junior College Educators Hear
New Ideas on Ag Instruction

Good, well managed herds of cattle in the immediate vicinity should be used for instructional purposes, Dr. J. C. Miller of the Animal Husbandry Department told members of the Junior College Conference here last week.

Such arrangements would be more satisfactory in providing laboratories than would makeshift units owned and operated by the college, Miller pointed out to the agricultural section of the conference.

The conference, which was split into agricultural and industrial sections, closed Saturday morning after a two-day meeting of considering the problems of terminal education in the junior college.

The agricultural sessions were headed by C. N. Sheppardson, dean of the School of Agriculture, and the industrial sessions were under the direction of H. W. Barlow, dean of engineering.

The functions of a trade or occupational analysis were explained to the industrial section of the two-group conference by Chris H. Groneman of the Industrial Education Department.

Groneman warned that "a one man analysis is to be guarded against because it represents one man's point of view." He urged that both teachers and craftsmen participate in the analysis.

"In a terminal course in poultry production," Dr. J. H. Quisenberry, head of the Poultry Husbandry Department, told the agriculture section, "many subjects must be covered in more detail than would ordinarily be necessary in a general college survey course used as a prerequisite to more advanced courses in specific fields of production."

Such a course must present practical information on breeding, incubation, brooding, housing, feeding, parasites and diseases, marketing, and poultry farm management.

Extension Service
Gets Dual-Control
Instruction Auto

A new Ford equipped with dual controls for driver training, was delivered to the Industrial Extension Service of A&M last Thursday. The car, which will be used in a newly created course covering the operation of police department emergency vehicles, will be used throughout the state by Russell Fitzpatrick, in charge of the motor transport training division of the IES.

Loaned to the college by the Bryan Motor Company, of Bryan, the car will be used until it has run 8000 miles and will then be returned to the dealer and a new car substituted.

Part of a program supported by the nation's automotive manufacturers, and designed primarily to further driver education and training in high schools, the car loan plan is supported locally by dealers in the various communities where such training is offered.

The Ford is to be used throughout Texas while the Chevrolet loaned to the College last June by the Corbusier Company, of Bryan, will be used in connection with the driver education and training program at Consolidated High School in College Station.

The Landscape Art Club is presently leading in The Agriculturalist Magazine subscription drive. Although it is hard pressed by other clubs, this relatively small group has obtained more subscriptions than any other.

Winner of this contest, which is limited to clubs in the School of Agriculture, will be determined by the number of subscriptions sold per paid-up member in the club. A free barbecue will be the prize to the winning club. Additional subscription blanks may be obtained in the Agriculturalist Office in Room 207 Goodwin.

The contest will end at 5 p. m. November 12, and the winner will be announced on Monday, November 15.
