Deadline Nears For Danforth Study Awards

Students desiring to be considered for Danforth Summer. Study Fellowships should file applications at once, according to J. Wheeler Barger, chairman of the Danforth Award Committee. The selections will be made Wednesday afternoon, April 6.

Three 1949 Summer Study Fellowships have been made available for agricultural students by the Danforth Foundation. One of these will be awarded to an outstanding junior and the two others to outstanding freshmen. One of the freshmen must be taking the Pre-Veterinary course. The other may be enrolled in any other curriculum in the School of Agriculture.

The junior winner will join a group of 34 representatives of other land-grant colleges at St. Louis the first of August for a two-weeks' study, as guest of the Ralston Purina Mills, of the problems of manufacturing, commercial research, distribution, advertising and personnel.

In making selections, the com-nittee will give consideration to scholarship, leadership, activities and general culture. Students desiring to be considered for the awards should call at his office, Room 401, Agriculture Building, for information and application blanks, Barger said.

By FRANK CUSHING

The long-winded and almost-per-petual "So You Know A&M?" con-test is now officially closed. Never-the-less there is still some doubt as to who will receive the three prizes involved. When the final tally for the seven weeks of competition was computed it was discovered that three students are tied with perfect scores.
