

Video Supplies Donated to College

A demonstration television camera and viewing tube has been given to the Electrical Engineering Department by the Westinghouse Electric Corporation. M. C. Hughes, head of the department, announced today.

The apparatus was used as demonstration equipment at the 1940 World Fair in New York. It does not use the newest type of television picture tube, but it will be of great value to the electronic laboratory, Hughes stated. New apparatus equivalent to it would cost about $20,000, Hughes concluded.

Ag Exes Top Among Grads

The success of six former A&M students who entered the University of Texas Medical School was given as an example of the thorough training given pre-med students at A&M by acting dean of the college Dr. M. T. Harrington before the May Board of Directors meeting.

Dr. Harrington, speaking to the directors, cited a report he had received from the dean of the medical school.

The report stated that the January 1948 graduating class of the medical school included six Aggie exes. And, in a class of 95 students, all of the six former students of A&M were listed among the top ten high ranking graduates.

Agronomy Class Visits Temple Area

Members of the Agronomy 418 class visited Blackland Experiment Station in Temple and the Elm Creek Water Shed Saturday.

Dr. J. R. Johnston, superintendent of the Blackland Experiment Station, conducted the trip through the experiment station. He showed the class methods of measuring soil loss, experimental crop rotation systems, new varieties of clover, winter cover crops and several other projects. Also, he told the group of some projects which are still in the planning stage.

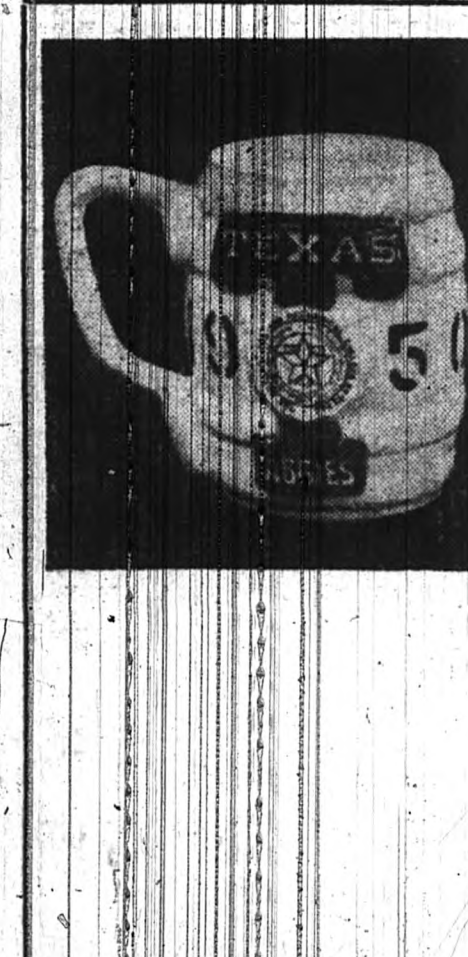

On the Elm Creek Water Shed, conservation practices, pasture grasses, soil types and erosion control were pointed out and discussed with the group.
