

QM Boys Win Volleyball; Take 14th in Marksmanship

By BEE LANDRUM

Company D proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that it is the best company in the QM ROTC camp when two of its universities took the softball and volleyball championships today.

More Club Interest Vital, Adams Says

Dr. Adams, head of the Agronomy Department, suggested at a meeting of the Agronomy Society that the officers of the society continue their work in getting more agronomy majors interested in the activities of the organization. The group held its meeting last Tuesday evening in the Extension Service Building.

Several important issues concerning the fall term were discussed. The date of the first meeting of the fall semester was set for September 27. This meeting will be for the purpose of electing Fall officers.

Professor J. W. Barger of the Agricultural Economics Department gave an interesting and informative lecture on some legal aspects of farming.

Yesterday A&M won the volleyball semi-final by defeating Oklahoma University the first two games of a three game series by scores of 15-10 and 15-12. Then they won the camp championship by taking the first three games of a five game series.

This ended a perfect season for the Aggies who lost no games either in practice or championship competition. The regular players on the volleyball squad were Lincoln Hirsch, Tom Brundrett, Ayres Anderson, Ivy Johansen, "Punk" Sauls, and Percy Burk.

Illinois took the camp softball championship by defeating the University of Houston 4-2. Forty Texas Aggies gave yells for the Illinois who had given them the toughest intracompany competition. They were glad to help anyone beat the University of Houston.

Forestry Training Camp to Be Held

A forestry training camp, to be sponsored jointly by the Texas Forest Service, A&M, and the Texas Forestry Association, will be conducted on the E. O. Siske Forest near Kirbyville August 1-5.

Thirty-six vocational agriculture students and thirty-six 4-H boys have been selected from the thirty-six East Texas counties in the commercial timber belt. The boys will receive practical training to be applied on their own farm woodlands.

Instructors will include Don Young, Bob Rhodes and M. V. Dunmire of the Texas Forest Service, and Buddy Freeman of the Southern Pulpmo Conservation Association. They will be assisted by six county agents and six vocational agriculture teachers.

Publication of the M-1 caliber rifle qualifications showed the Aggies to be ranked 14th among twenty-five universities. Oklahoma University was first with the University of Houston third and the "tea-sips" fifth.

A&M qualified eight experts, nine sharpshooters, and twenty-two marksmen. The cadets of Company D have fired their carbine qualification shots, but the results have not yet been posted.

Dogs of All Kinds Trail Hood Aggies

By C. C. MUNROE
Camp Hood-Batt Correspondent (Cav.)

(Editor's Note: Because we have so many episodes over dogs here, we decided to run this story even though Camp Hood summer camp ended Friday.)

Maybe dogs attract Aggies or maybe Aggies attract dogs but which ever way it is, there always seem to be a lot of canines around when the cadets from A&M are in the area.

And so it is at Camp Hood where 61 Aggies are taking cavalry training.

When the ROTC students first dragged into Camp Hood there wasn't a dog to be seen. Then, not three hours after our arrival, a beautiful German police dog made its appearance. However, this particular dog turned out to belong to the Company F supply officer, Lt. Kochie.

Then about two weeks ago, on a peaceful evening John Taylor, an Aggie of F Company, came strolling down from the PX and tailing him was a large, gray, mixed breed dog.

Nobody knows where it came from. One day it showed up beside the mess hall door and chances are ten to one that somebody, usually an Aggie, is feeding it leftovers from the evening meal.

The lieutenant's police dog fares pretty well too. At first it refused to eat any of the dozens of tempting morsels placed before it. But now it realizes that none of the cadets have designs on its life and it will gobble up anything in sight.

In fact, the lieutenant's dog, Major by name, fares better than we do many times. It follows the supply officer around all day and night. Out on the rifle range while the cadets were sweating in the sun the dog slept under the water trailer.

When we were driving tanks the dog snoozed in the shade of nearby trees.

Major gets to stay up past the cadet's 11 p. m. too. And, when the lieutenant has the duty officer's job, the dog makes bedchamber with the officer. More than one cadet has been wakened during the early part of the night by a cold muzzle and slobbering tongue.

And, to top off the insults, Major rides while we walk. Today the two companies of cavalry were slogging along in the dust and sun almost content with their lot. Then, out of the distance appeared a three quarter ton truck.

The lieutenant rode in front and perched serenely in the rear was our friendly police dog, Major. But would he give us a friendly glance? No. He just held his head high in the air and breezed right on by with out so much as a look of recognition.

But he'll be around when the mess call rings tonight and we'll all be friends again.
