What's Cooking Love of Shark Fin Soup May Produce New Texan Industry

BY RAY CARPENTER

Rockport, Tex., -A Chinese love of shark fin soup may produce a brand-new industry in Tex-

Results of a State Marine Laboratory fishing experiment off the Texas coast show there are enough sharks in the warm waters to support a fishery. This means several commercial sharking boats, plus occasional sharkers could build an industry to help supply the world with shark fins and livers.

Vitamin-rich livers are more valuable than fins. But fins would produce extra revenue to make fishing for the dusky creatures profitable. Shark skin to an extent is made into leather. Shark liver extract was given to Air prove their night vision.

Livers are rich in vitamin A, which is extracted as a substitute for cod liver oil. Price ranges from 10 to 12 cents per Roughly, the livers make up 15 per cent of the shark, Fins are exported to the Chinese for their loved delicacy-shark fin soup. In an experiment off Rockport, the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster

Subsurface Plows Used to Save Soil

LUBBOCK, Tex.— (AP) —Ploughs that work only underneath the surface are advocated to stop soil erosion by Dr. A. W. Young, head of the plant industry department of Texas Technological College.

These plows have chisel noses and underground blades to cut the subsoil on each side. They leave in place the stubble of previous crops. Every bit of stubble or any other crop residue left with its roots in a field, says Dr. Young, is both a natural wind break and a water dam.

The stubble binds the top soil from blowing away as dust, and from eroding in water. The stubble also furnishes little pipes down which rain water penetrates into the soil, instead of mostly running off on the surface. As the stubble decomposes, it furnishes a sort of binding cement to hold soil particles more firmly in place.

Eighty - nine sharks were caught off mile-long trot lines using 518 hooks, baited with porpoise, red fish and trout. Most of them were tiger sharks. They liked the porpoise best.

Several sharks were lost in towng them to port. The experimental boat, captained by George Nava, was too small to bring all the catch aboard. An average price of $6.50 per shark was realized.

Porter said, "the experiment filled with hammerheads and bull showed commercial shark fishing sharks. They grow bigger and have would be profitable along the Tex- livers richer in vitamin A.

C. L. Baughman, of the State Marine Laboratories said sharking could be carried on in bad cannot operate. This would be profitable off-season fishing for shrimpers. The Marine Laboratory experts conducting the test were limited by lack of adequate equipment. They feel if they had a larger boat and could go farther out in the Gulf, the trot lines would be
