of students who selected and packed the best they could find of the valley fruit, Krezdorn said.

The vegetables have a rather original display. They are arranged to compare the best of the vegetables with those with defects.

In this division are some of the choice cabbages, potatoes, yams, and onions.

Six Pecan Types.

A large part of the show area is devoted to pecans. They are arranged to show the effects of cross breeding with the six most popular kinds of pecans.

Along with the pecan varieties will be samples of pecan products. This display includes such products as pralines, pecan date loaf, salted pecans, and chocolate covered pecans. Vacuum packed pecans will also be shown. These pecans that have been vacuum packed will last from six months to a year, the student in charge of the exhibit said.

One of the last exhibits is that of propagation. Here are displayed the various methods of grafting. Along with these illustrations are some samples of grafting during the growing period.

Work done on the use of hormones on stem cuttings is a part of the propagation exhibit. This is stressed by the comparison of buds with hormone treatment with that of those not treated.

Local AGC Hosts To Houston Group

The A&M Chapter of the American General Contractors Association had as their guests the officers of the Houston Chapter of the association at the campus group's meeting Monday night.

President C. A. Schneider of the Houston chapter gave a short address, after which a panel discussion was held on what the professional world expects of construction graduates.

Panel speakers from the Houston group were Schneider, treasurer Fred Fisher, vice president Howard Tellipson, and secretary Lloyd Duddleston.

Guest speaker for the night was R. B. Butler, contractor from Bryan.

Insurance Movies Set Tonight

Sidney L. Loveless, life insurance instructor in the Department of Business and Accounting, will show several life insurance films in the YMCA chapel on December 15 at 3:30 p. m. Loveless is bringing these films for instructional purposes for all students studying insurance at the college.

The best known of these films is "For Some Must Watch." The film tells the story of a doctor and his wife and shows how she managed through his long illness. There is also the widow who solves the problem of earning a living for a young family and the farm family which overcomes the disaster of crop ruin.

Through it all there is the life insurance agent who helps these people and others to solve their financial problems.

Another film, "The Search for Security," traces the development of life insurance from the insuring of ship captains against death during voyage or capture by pirates. Another sequence explains the operation of modern life insurance showing what happens to policy holders' premium payments. Dramatizations show the use of life insurance in reaching various individual and family goals.

"American Portrait," featuring screen star Alan Ladd, tells of the improvements in the way of life which have come into being during the last century. Inventiveness and ingenuity create these improvements - salesmanship has been responsible for bringing them into widespread use.

Although these films are being brought mainly for student use, any interested person is invited to attend the showing, Loveless said.
