

First Guests Send Ball Acceptances

Six general officers, a congressman, and a commander of the Texas Military District have definitely accepted invitations to attend the 1950 Military Ball, John L. Taylor, chairman of the guest committee, said today.

Headed by Lt. Gen. LeRoy Lutes and Congressman Olin E. Teague, the guest list promises to rival that of last year.

Gen. Lutes is commanding officer of the Fourth Army which has its headquarters in San Antonio.

Congressman Teague, Class of '32, will fly to A&M from Washington for the March 18 weekend.

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Johnson,

Class of '17, is another general officer who has accepted an invitation to the ball. He is commanding officer of the 22nd Division, ORC, and is presently stationed in Mexico City. He is the father of Harry H. Johnson Jr., senior cavalry cadet from Houston.

Maj. Gen. H. Ainsworth, commanding officer of the 36th Division of the Texas National Guard will also be in the reviewing stand for the Saturday afternoon review. Joining him will be Maj. Gen. K. L. Barry, adjutant general of the State of Texas.

Air Force General

Another official guest who will fly to A&M from Washington is Maj. Gen. W. E. Old. He is inspector general for the U. S. Air Force Headquarters in the Pentagon Building.

Maj. Gen. A. R. Crawford, commanding officer of the 12th Air Force will come to A&M from San Antonio for the weekend. His headquarters is at Brooks Air Force Base in that city.

Colonel Oscar Abbott, commanding officer of the Texas Military District in Austin will join the other official guests present at the college for the Military Ball.

Invitations have also been sent to several other military and civilian dignitaries, Taylor commented, but not all have been accepted at this time. Some persons who have received invitations informed Taylor that they could not definitely commit themselves so far in advance. These people will be contacted again before the ball, Taylor said.

Invitation Distribution

Announcement of the first acceptance for the Military Ball came at the same time the invitation committee said that members of all classes were eligible to receive invitations.

In a statement Tuesday evening, Gene Chase, chairman of the invitation committee, said first sergeants would handle distribution of invitations on the main campus. Freshmen at the Annex will be able to get their invitations from Mrs. Ann Hilliard in the Student Center.

Distribution of the invitations will begin on March 18 both on the campus and at the Annex, Chase said.

Tickets for the Duke Ellington concert will go on sale to non-military students March 1, according to Chase. They will be available in the Office of Student Activities at that time.

Corps students wishing tickets to the concert may buy them two weeks before the concert to non-military students. The concert will begin at 6:30 p. m., Saturday.

Docia Schultz and Ann Malcom (l. to r.) are two of the six beauties who will be in the race tomorrow night for the title of Sweetheart of the Junior Prom. Docia, a TSCW junior will be escorted by Lee Stainback and Ann's escort will be J. D. Hinton. Ann is a student at Hockaday Jr. College in Dallas.

RV's Hold Initiation Banquet Tonight At 7

Major General A. D. Bruce, Deputy Army Commander of the 4th Army Headquarters, will be main speaker at an initiation banquet of new members of the Ross Volunteer Company tonight in Sbia Hall. The Deputy Commander is an ex-RV and a member of the class of '16.

The annual affair, beginning at 7 p. m., will initiate another year of escort and honor guard activities.

Honor guests for the banquet initiation will be Chancellor Gibb Gilchrist, D. C. Arnold, Colonel O. C. Krueger, P. L. Downs, Mrs. Irene Claghorn, Lt. Colonel Joe F. Davis, Colonel H. L. Boatner, Lt. Colonel John Kelly, Major L. F. Walker, Captain J. G. Otis, Sergeant D. V. Stroud, E. L. Angell, and Lieutenant Joseph, General Bruce's aide.

Military Decorations

Regimental flags and a large 20 by 38 ft. garrison flag will adorn the wall behind the speaker's table. Red, white, and blue candles will be arranged on each table. Streamers in the same colors will run lengthwise down the tables' centers.

Ferns or flowers will be set up behind the speaker's table.

Initiation ceremonies will be presided over by D. P. "Doggy" McClure, commanding officer of the organization, and will consist of a roll call of new members by Jim Hatzenbuehler, reading of the constitution by Ken Landrum, and administration of the oath by Bennett and Horace Gresley. In a short history of the company, which in the past has gone under such names as Scott Volunteers, campus elections rolled around, Bond's was the first name in the race for the non-military co-editor position. Art Howard, then the sports editor, was the second applicant in the race, and definitely looked like the man to beat. Just to make a larger field, some of the office wisecracks talked me into making it a three man affair.

Art was far and away the race favorite. He had the most seniority, had a daily by-line in the paper and a regular column with a picture, and in all of his connections knew droves of voters. Kennedy, conversely, lived off the regular campus in Vet Village and spent most of the time studying that Art and I spent drinking coffee and meeting new students.

The day campaigning opened, however, the Bond stock became celt edged. Kenny launched a carefully planned, beautifully executed campaign that buried Art and me in a flurry of political posters. Bond and his close friends covered every room on the campus handing out mimeographed platforms. Bond posters sprouted from every tree and bill board. The West Texas cyclone himself took a dorm a night and told everybody he could catch how he would make a better Battalion.

When the votes were counted, Art and I might as well have saved our entrance blank. It was Bond by a well directed landslide.

I never regretted the outcome of that election. Kenny moved into the job like it was made for him, and with his co-editor, Tom Carter, whipped into line the best Art and I ever seen on The Battalion.

Kenny was never a great writer himself. But he wrote steadily and sincerely, and could spot another man's mistake a mile away. Assigning stories, correcting grammar and spelling, and recruiting new writers with a will, Kenneth developed a beautiful battery of writers and put new life into the Batt. During his year as co-editor a flock of the finest stories I've ever seen in the paper came out under such by-lines as Dave Coslett, C. C. Munroe, Frank Cushing, C. C. Trail, Buddy Luce, Harvey Cherry, Chuck Maisel, Harvey Chief, and half a mast-head of other talented typewriters.

It was during Kenny's year that we picked up the National (See BOND LEAVES, Page 4)

By the end of the year (1947) Kenny had been named one of the five managing editors. When the

Kenneth Bond

Leach Explains Scandanavian Social Program

One of the main aims of the governments of the Scandanavian nations is to give their full support to social movements beneficial to the people, Dr. H. G. Leach, president of the Scandanavian-American Foundation told Great Issues students last night.

Some people have the mistaken idea that the Scandanavian states are welfare states, Leach said. "This is not true," he continued. Instead, the Scandanavian governments encourage private enterprise and will give their financial support to any worthwhile project.

This is particularly true in Denmark, Leach pointed out. He cited the Danish "sickness clubs", which are a form of health insurance. These clubs, which provide financial help to disabled persons, are supported through both private and public funds.

Another project receiving both federal and private financial support in Denmark is the unemployment insurance program.

Leach spoke to more than 100 students in Dr. S. R. Gammon's Great Issues class in the Electrical Engineering Building.

He explained the different attitudes toward the people of the governments of Russia, the United States, and the Scandanavian nations.

Russia attempts to establish equality among its citizens by lowering all the people to the "lowest common denominator", Leach said. In the United States, the ideal citizen is the "average" man. In the Scandanavian countries, the government attempts to raise all the people's living and educational standards to the highest possible level.

"The Scandanavians think it odd," Leach said, "that the people of the United States will nominate an ordinary "average" man to the public office. The practice in their countries is to nominate the "most intelligent" person for public office, regardless of his vote-pulling power.

Leach pointed out that, while the Scandanavian idea is commendable, he preferred the system practiced in this country.

Another quarter of the Chest goal, or $1,000, will go to the World Student Service Fund. "A&M has contributed annually for several years to the WSSF," Montgomery told the group. "While we help those at home, we should also help those in other countries who are students and need our aid."

Last year A&M contributed over $800 to the WSSF. Half of this money went to a school in Greece, and the other half to a school in romantic Latin star of melody will present a concert in Guion Hall Saturday at 8:30 p. m. Carlos will not come alone when he starts the Spring All-College Dance season; with him will come a very talented young dancer. Baffling Bull Ballard will mystify the audience with his feats of slight of hand, which are reminiscent of the by-gone vaudeville days.

Sophy Parker, a little 800 lb. singer, will add her little bit by singing. Bobby Lyar, comic master of ceremonies will handle the program.

In addition to the stage show the people attending will be permitted to see the regularly scheduled movie in Guion with no additional charge.

A cheering note for all "Stardust" Dancers is the fact that Carlos will play mostly North American popular music at the Saturday night affair, Grady Elms, assistant director of student activities announced.

Carlos and his orchestra come here after a long series of hotel engagements including stands at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles, the Roosevelt Hotel in Hollywood, the Congress Hotel in Chicago, and the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Boston.

In addition to playing in hotels, Carlos has made several movie shorts for Universal Studios.

Admission will be 70 cents for the concert. This includes the privilege of staying to see the movie which will follow the Carlos Molina Concert.

Ducats for the ball will be $1.50 stag or drag. Tickets are now on sale at the Student Activities Office in Godwin Hall.

Barbecue Planned For 'T' Association

Plans for Sports Day and the Spring Formal Dance will be discussed at the first meeting of the new year for the "T" Association Friday Feb. 17, 6:30 p. m. The meeting is at Richard Callender and Jimmie Cashion's cabin on the Navasota River, George Kadara, publicity director for the "T" Association announced today.

Entertainment at the meeting will be in the form of a barbecue. Transportation can be arranged by contacting Jimmie Cashion before Friday, Feb. 10.

Three Aggies Attacked By Mustang Lettermen

Three A&M students were assaulted and one of the boys' dates, an SMU girl, was pushed to the ground by a group of well-built young men, identified by the Aggies SMU co-ed dates as SMU football players, Tuesday night in front of Perkins Gymnasium.

The Aggies were veteran yell leader Bill "Tex" Thornton, who was held by two men while another beat him about the face and head; former Cadet Capt. J. A. "Bix" Davis, who was hit in the face and kicked in the side; and former Cadet Colonel Bob McClure, who was held back from helping his friends by a wrestling struggle hold.

The three Aggies were attacked as they left Perkins Gym after A&M's basketball game with SMU.

Thornton was leading the Aggie bull dog mascot, "Moses", on a leash and was aware of nothing unusual, he said, until his arms were pinned to his side and several of the athletes began beating him.

Thornton was walking with his date, Davis was behind him with the wife of one of A&M's varsity basketball players, and McClure and his date were in front of Thornton. The yell leader's date, and Davis' companion, were pushed aside and Thornton was held and beaten. Davis and McClure started to help Thornton but were held back by the 8 or 10 men who were active in the affair, Davis said.

McClure held

Three men held him, McClure said, and two men beat Thornton while two or three held him. Thornton was knocked unconscious and the dog was taken from him. Davis grabbed at the dog's leash, he said, and was knocked to the sidewalk and kicked in the side.

By this time the fight had attracted a large crowd, Davis said, and their assailants released them and went back into the crowd.

Although the bull dog's blanket was torn, the Aggies retained their mascot and brought him back to college.

Names of their suspected assailants, all members of the SMU varsity football squad, were turned in to the Dean of Student's Office by the Aggie trio, and a letter of investigation has been sent to SMU dean of student's office by the local office.

Joe Fuller reported on the findings of his Traffic Committee. The committee has met with the College Traffic Committee and discussed problems, both immediate and long-range, pertaining to campus traffic. The whole problem, Fuller stated, resolved itself in the fact that this campus was not built to handle so much traffic.

His committee will meet again this month and have further information for the Senate at their next meeting.

Hal Stringer told of plans made thus far by the Job Clinic Committee. This committee is working with the Placement Office to plan a series of programs for the benefit of students. The Job Clinic would bring speakers from industry to address students on subjects relating to what the student may expect to encounter upon graduation.

At the convention, A&M will head the panel discussion, "Cultural Entertainment for T I S A member schools." This will be a discussion on the possibilities of securing big names in the entertainment world at reduced rates through a TISA circuit, Ailsup said.

King Egger, chairman of the Religious Emphasis Week Committee, announced plans for Religious Emphasis Week and asked the Senate's help in making the week a success. The Senate indicated that it would cooperate in whatever way possible with the workers in Religious Emphasis Week.

The March meeting of the Senate will be at the Bryan Field Annex.

Dan Davis, vice-president of the Sophomore Class and a student senator, is the state vice-president of TISA.

At the convention, A&M will head the panel discussion, "Cultural Entertainment for T I S A member schools." This will be a discussion on the possibilities of securing big names in the entertainment world at reduced rates through a TISA circuit, Ailsup said.

King Egger, chairman of the Religious Emphasis Week Committee, announced plans for Religious Emphasis Week and asked the Senate's help in making the week a success. The Senate indicated that it would cooperate in whatever way possible with the workers in Religious Emphasis Week.

The March meeting of the Senate will be at the Bryan Field Annex.

Dan Davis, vice-president of the Sophomore Class and a student senator, is the state vice-president of TISA.

At the convention, A&M will head the panel discussion, "Cultural Entertainment for T I S A member schools." This will be a discussion on the possibilities of securing big names in the entertainment world at reduced rates through a TISA circuit, Ailsup said.

King Egger, chairman of the Religious Emphasis Week Committee, announced plans for Religious Emphasis Week and asked the Senate's help in making the week a success. The Senate indicated that it would cooperate in whatever way possible with the workers in Religious Emphasis Week.

The March meeting of the Senate will be at the Bryan Field Annex.

Dan Davis, vice-president of the Sophomore Class and a student senator, is the state vice-president of TISA.

At the convention, A&M will head the panel discussion, "Cultural Entertainment for T I S A member schools." This will be a discussion on the possibilities of securing big names in the entertainment world at reduced rates through a TISA circuit, Ailsup said.

King Egger, chairman of the Religious Emphasis Week Committee, announced plans for Religious Emphasis Week and asked the Senate's help in making the week a success. The Senate indicated that it would cooperate in whatever way possible with the workers in Religious Emphasis Week.

The March meeting of the Senate will be at the Bryan Field Annex.

Dan Davis, vice-president of the Sophomore Class and a student senator, is the state vice-president of TISA.

At the convention, A&M will head the panel discussion, "Cultural Entertainment for T I S A member schools." This will be a discussion on the possibilities of securing big names in the entertainment world at reduced rates through a TISA circuit, Ailsup said.

King Egger, chairman of the Religious Emphasis Week Committee, announced plans for Religious Emphasis Week and asked the Senate's help in making the week a success. The Senate indicated that it would cooperate in whatever way possible with the workers in Religious Emphasis Week.

The March meeting of the Senate will be at the Bryan Field Annex.

Dan Davis, vice-president of the Sophomore Class and a student senator, is the state vice-president of TISA.

At the convention, A&M will head the panel discussion, "Cultural Entertainment for T I S A member schools." This will be a discussion on the possibilities of securing big names in the entertainment world at reduced rates through a TISA circuit, Ailsup said.

King Egger, chairman of the Religious Emphasis Week Committee, announced plans for Religious Emphasis Week and asked the Senate's help in making the week a success. The Senate indicated that it would cooperate in whatever way possible with the workers in Religious Emphasis Week.

The March meeting of the Senate will be at the Bryan Field Annex.

Rev. Hayden Edwards

Edwards to Be Annex Speaker For RE Week

Rev. Hayden Edwards, pastor of the Polytechnic Methodist Church of Ft. Worth, will be the principal speaker at the Annex during Religious Emphasis Week, February 13 to 17, according to Gordon Gay, assistant secretary of the YMCA.

Reverend Edwards will stay at the Annex and take his meals with the students. He will be available at all times for private conferences and group discussions.

Arriving here Saturday night, he will hold the first services in the Annex Chapel, Sunday morning at 11 a. m. There will also be a 6-45 service Sunday night and every night of Religious Emphasis Week.

Morning services at the Annex are scheduled to be held from 9 to 10 Monday morning; Tuesday and Wednesday from 10 to 11 a. m.; and Thursday and Friday from 11 to 12.

Classes will be dismissed at these times so everyone may attend the services, Gay said.

Edwards is a graduate of John Tarleton College and Texas Wesleyan College, receiving his B. S. degree from the latter. He also has done work at the Perkins School of Theology at SMU.

Weatherford College and Texas Wesleyan have been privileged to hear Reverend Edwards during their Religious Emphasis Weeks in previous years.

Invitations Mailed For Cotton Pageant

Invitations to send Duchesses to the 16th Annual Cotton Pageant and Ball have been extended to various clubs and organizations by the Agronomy Society, David Rives, head of the invitations committee, said today.

Invitations were sent to all campus organizations, all A&M Mother's Clubs, all A&M former student organizations, all senior colleges and universities of the state, and a few select colleges from out of the state, Rives continued.

All campus organizations desiring to enter a Duchess that have not received invitations should contact David Rives, Box 4266, College Station. This should be done immediately so that the Agronomy Society can contact each Duchess as soon as possible.

Rome Censures Bergman Attacks

Rome, Wednesday, Feb. 10 (AP)—One of Rome's leading Catholic newspapers today censured American attacks against the Ingrid Bergman-Roberto Rossellini film "Stromboli."

"Let be among you who is without sin cast the first stone," said Il Popolo, official organ of Premier Alcide DeGasperi's Christian Democratic (Catholic) Party.

But Not Forgotten . . .

Bond Ends First Leg of Success Trip As A&M's Initial Journalism Grad

By BILL BILLINGSLEY

Kenneth Zane Bond has gone back to West Texas. But even though he's left the campus, it'll be a long time before the rising red head is forgotten around College Station.

Kenneth was graduated at mid-semester with the first full degree in Journalism ever presented by A&M College. As usual, he had one of the best scholastic averages in the graduating class. He stepped right into a good job with The Pecos Enterprise, one of the top weeklies in West Texas, at a salary that all the journalism hopefuls around Bizzell Hall regarded with a green-eyed glare.

And though he left the campus the same way he enrolled as a freshman, quietly and with no fanfare, almost everybody on the campus knows something about Kenneth Bond.

He had a knack for making people remember him.

In classes he had a quick perception and tireless tenacity that made him a distinguished student every semester, and that caused other students registering for courses, and seeing Bond's name on the roster, to automatically subtract one from the number of open exemptions.

He served on an impressive list of campus committees and councils, and built up an even more impressive list of accomplishments in campus and college improvements.

To accompany his bulldog tenacity, Kenneth had a highly developed sense of moral right and wrong. He would, and has, argued long and hard with the president of the college, or three fourths of the student body, when he thought he was right and the opposition was wrong.

Those of us on The Battalion, who worked with him on the job that occupied most of his time away from his books, remember and respect the red head for a lot of lesser-known traits.

After he registered as a freshman in September of 1947, it took "Fish" Bond only a few days to make up his mind to make his campus mark on The Batt. Kenneth had been on the payroll only six weeks when I moved in beside him as an extremely low understudy on the feature desk, but I immediately formed the impression that he was one of the chief foundation stones of the organization, and only slightly less gifted than a combination James Gordon Bennett and Horace Greeley. In three years of working with him, I never lost that impression.

But with all his brilliance in grammar and organization, an occasional rough edge showed through as a moment of his quick and rugged climb in education. Kenny was born, and grew up, in the wheatlands around Pampa, where the rain freezes on the cattle's backs in the winter and the sun bakes mud back to dust in the summer. He followed enough combines to know how to make the most of his time and to be on intimate relations with hard work.

Vick Lindley, our editor then, used to jibe Kenny about his West Texas courtesy in saying "Ma'm" to every female voice on the phone. And Mack Nolan, our '47 feature editor, gave Kenny some bad times about his shortcomings in opera and the fine arts.

But you never got to razz the red head more than once on any given topic—he always remembered it, the next time, and had usually picked up a little extra information on the side.

By the end of the year (1947) Kenny had been named one of the five managing editors. When the campus elections rolled around, Bond's was the first name in the race for the non-military co-editor position. Art Howard, then the sports editor, was the second applicant in the race, and definitely looked like the man to beat. Just to make a larger field, some of the office wisecracks talked me into making it a three man affair.

Art was far and away the race favorite. He had the most seniority, had a daily by-line in the paper and a regular column with a picture, and in all of his connections knew droves of voters. Kennedy, conversely, lived off the regular campus in Vet Village and spent most of the time studying that Art and I spent drinking coffee and meeting new students.

The day campaigning opened, however, the Bond stock became celt edged. Kenny launched a carefully planned, beautifully executed campaign that buried Art and me in a flurry of political posters. Bond and his close friends covered every room on the campus handing out mimeographed platforms. Bond posters sprouted from every tree and bill board. The West Texas cyclone himself took a dorm a night and told everybody he could catch how he would make a better Battalion.

When the votes were counted, Art and I might as well have saved our entrance blank. It was Bond by a well directed landslide.

I never regretted the outcome of that election. Kenny moved into the job like it was made for him, and with his co-editor, Tom Carter, whipped into line the best Art and I ever seen on The Battalion.

Kenny was never a great writer himself. But he wrote steadily and sincerely, and could spot another man's mistake a mile away. Assigning stories, correcting grammar and spelling, and recruiting new writers with a will, Kenneth developed a beautiful battery of writers and put new life into the Batt. During his year as co-editor a flock of the finest stories I've ever seen in the paper came out under such by-lines as Dave Coslett, C. C. Munroe, Frank Cushing, C. C. Trail, Buddy Luce, Harvey Cherry, Chuck Maisel, Harvey Chief, and half a mast-head of other talented typewriters.

It was during Kenny's year that we picked up the National (See BOND LEAVES, Page 4)

By the end of the year (1947) Kenny had been named one of the five managing editors. When the campus elections rolled around, Bond's was the first name in the race for the non-military co-editor position. Art Howard, then the sports editor, was the second applicant in the race, and definitely looked like the man to beat. Just to make a larger field, some of the office wisecracks talked me into making it a three man affair.

Art was far and away the race favorite. He had the most seniority, had a daily by-line in the paper and a regular column with a picture, and in all of his connections knew droves of voters. Kennedy, conversely, lived off the regular campus in Vet Village and spent most of the time studying that Art and I spent drinking coffee and meeting new students.

The day campaigning opened, however, the Bond stock became celt edged. Kenny launched a carefully planned, beautifully executed campaign that buried Art and me in a flurry of political posters. Bond and his close friends covered every room on the campus handing out mimeographed platforms. Bond posters sprouted from every tree and bill board. The West Texas cyclone himself took a dorm a night and told everybody he could catch how he would make a better Battalion.

When the votes were counted, Art and I might as well have saved our entrance blank. It was Bond by a well directed landslide.

I never regretted the outcome of that election. Kenny moved into the job like it was made for him, and with his co-editor, Tom Carter, whipped into line the best Art and I ever seen on The Battalion.

Molina In Guion Show, To Play Valentine Ball

Carlos Molina, and his Music of the Americas will provide the music for the Valentine's Day dance in Club Sbia February 11. In addition to the dance the romantic Latin star of melody will present a concert in Guion Hall Saturday at 8:30 p. m. Carlos will not come alone when he starts the Spring All-College Dance season; with him will come a very talented young dancer. Baffling Bull Ballard will mystify the audience with his feats of slight of hand, which are reminiscent of the by-gone vaudeville days.

Sophy Parker, a little 800 lb. singer, will add her little bit by singing. Bobby Lyar, comic master of ceremonies will handle the program.

In addition to the stage show the people attending will be permitted to see the regularly scheduled movie in Guion with no additional charge.

A cheering note for all "Stardust" Dancers is the fact that Carlos will play mostly North American popular music at the Saturday night affair, Grady Elms, assistant director of student activities announced.

Carlos and his orchestra come here after a long series of hotel engagements including stands at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles, the Roosevelt Hotel in Hollywood, the Congress Hotel in Chicago, and the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Boston.

In addition to playing in hotels, Carlos has made several movie shorts for Universal Studios.

Admission will be 70 cents for the concert. This includes the privilege of staying to see the movie which will follow the Carlos Molina Concert.

Ducats for the ball will be $1.50 stag or drag. Tickets are now on sale at the Student Activities Office in Godwin Hall.

Barbecue Planned For 'T' Association

Plans for Sports Day and the Spring Formal Dance will be discussed at the first meeting of the new year for the "T" Association Friday Feb. 17, 6:30 p. m. The meeting is at Richard Callender and Jimmie Cashion's cabin on the Navasota River, George Kadara, publicity director for the "T" Association announced today.

Entertainment at the meeting will be in the form of a barbecue. Transportation can be arranged by contacting Jimmie Cashion before Friday, Feb. 10.

Senate Discusses Chest Fund, TISA

The Campus Chest, student-faculty relations, Religious Emphasis Week, and campus traffic were discussed last evening by the Student Senate. Visiting the Senate and participating in the student-faculty discussion was the Executive Committee of the Academic Council of the College.

Monty Montgomery, chairman of the Senate Campus Chest committee, was given a green light of approval on the plans he and his committeemen announced for the Campus Chest drive. The drive will begin March 6 and continue through March 8. The goal set by the committee was $4,000.

Half of this amount, or $2,000, will go on a Twelfth Man Scholarship. This sum will be sufficient to enable a man to attend A&M for four years receiving $500 a semester. "We have many