An oil painting of Edwin J. Kyle, '99, former dean of agriculture here, will be presented to the college this year.

Seymour Stone, internationally known artist, will paint Dean Kyle's portrait, commemorating his long service and accomplishments in the field of agriculture and United States-Latin American relations.

Arrangements for the portrait were made by the following: John C. Mayfield, A&M graduate of 1923, Houston; Walter T. Burns, Monterey, Mexico; James P. Hamblen, Houston; Sterling C. Evans, Houston; and Ted W. Mohle, Houston.

Dean Kyle was born at Kyle, Texas, in 1876, and came to A&M as a student in 1896, graduating in June 1899. While a student, he was senior captain in command of the cadet corps, president of his class, and valedictorian, among other honors.

He later received another B. S. degree from Cornell University. In 1902, Cornell conferred a master's degree in science in agriculture upon him.

He then returned to A&M to teach, becoming agricultural dean in 1911. Kyle retired as dean of the A&M school of agriculture in 1943 and became dean emeritus. He was appointed U. S. ambassador to Guatemala in January 1945, a position which he occupied until 1948.

Council Approves Joint Sewage Plan

The College Station city council at a called meeting Monday afternoon approved plans for a joint College Station-Bryan project to install adequate sewerage disposal for the residences between College Station and Bryan. College Station will lay about 3,000 feet of sewerage lines from old Highway 6 to new Highway 8. Bryan will then continue the system through North Oakwood and Garden Acres to their new sewerage disposal plant, according to city manager Raymond Rogers.

Only a relatively few houses, those on the northern edge of College Station's and the southern fringe of Bryan's city limits, will benefit by the project, Rogers added.

Plans and specifications are being made by Fred J. Benson, City Engineer.

Battalion SOCIETY

Letters Yield Cash to Poet

Have you ever gone into the Post Office, opened your box and pulled out a letter containing an unexpected check from an unknown benefactor? Joseph H. Ryberg, freshman agronomy major from Galveston did just this Wednesday when he went to the Post Office.

The mysterious letter came from the D. K. Caldwell Foundation of Tyler, Texas. At first Joe did not know why he had been blessed with the money, but soon he discovered that his interest in poetry proved to be more than a means of personal entertainment.

The letter commended Joe for his outstanding work in college, and especially for his poem "Love of the Soil" which appeared in the January 1950, issue of The Agriculturist. Because of the fine sentiment he "so beautifully expressed," Joe found himself in a better financial position.

Joe acquired his interest in poetry during his junior year in high school, but "Love of the Soil" was the first of his efforts to be published or receive recognition.
