my spelling of plagiarism (plagiarism). But he is all wet in trying to give us readers the true word on the spelling of halleluiah. According to a somewhat reliable source, that particular exclamation can be spelled about as many ways as the surname of the Bard.

As to Mr. G's report that he is a devoted follower of one Hubert Rousset, I have one remark—if he too writes the way you do Mr. Gollob, or vice versa, then both of you are indebted to Mr. Rosenfield for your material. And as far as reading the Houston tabloid to which you refer, Mr. Gollob, I could probably get more information from the corresponding number of pages of Scotch tissue.

Pete Perkins '50

(Editor's Note—Amusements editor Gollob first of all suggests that Reader Perkins start using sources that are completely, not somewhat, reliable. And he has dashed off a quick note to Mr. Rousset, warning him that his plagiaristic activities have at last been discovered, and to the Houston Post, advising them to get on the ball and start equalizing the news coverage of Scotch tissue.)

A mammoth barbecue will be held to celebrate the completion of the building, some time in April, Colson said.

PREMIUMS PREMIUMS PREMIUMS

During 1950, we will give our customers premiums as a part of our advertising program. Each customer who saves her cash register receipts and brings them in the required amounts will receive highly desirable merchandise as an added bonus for trading here. No drawings. No delay at the cash register waiting for clerks to count out "stamps". No freight to pay on the merchandise you select. No rigid "percentage" cost of premiums in relation to our total sales. (This makes it possible to give the maximum values to those customers interested in our plan, whereas "stamp" plans require payment for all stamps given out, regardless of whether they are redeemed or not; and whether the response is excellent or poor.)
