

Education Without Vacation . . .

The "good old summertime" may become a thing of the past to children of grade school age.

Years ago youngsters were needed on the farm in the summer time, but improved farming methods and current migration to the cities has changed this.

Most children now live in small apartments, and both parents usually work to meet the increasing costs of living and raising a family.

Russia Returns to the United Nations . . .

The decision of the Soviet government to send its representative, Jakob A. Malik, back to the United Nations that he may serve as president of the Security Council for August came as a complete surprise to many.

In making this decision, the Russian government repudiates its former statement that it would have no part in the deliberations of the UN as long as representatives of Nationalist China are retained on the Security Council and other UN bodies.

The initial meeting under Russian presidency will disclose the purpose of their actions. Since Red China has not been recognized, Malik may attempt to declare that Nationalist China is not entitled to council representation.

If he does so, the Communist representative can be overruled only by a vote of 7 of the 11 members of the council. Presently, Nationalist China supporters do not appear to possess such strength.

It is also conceivable that the Communist forces wish to recapture some of Ernie Is No Encouragement . . .

Britain's socialist physicians and surgeons are angry at Ernest Bevin. Seems the British foreign secretary had his recent operations in hospitals that are not in the socialized medicine system.

Under the law, Bevin was entitled to go to a hospital named by the British Government and take a surgeon assigned to his case. Of course, there would first be a long wait before he could receive diagnosis, consultation, and such.

However, Bevin went to Manor House

Europe, and is under experiment in Center Line, Mich., and Rochester, Minn.

Dr. Jones also believes that full time occupation will make teaching more attractive as a profession. Los Angeles has increased the work year for teachers to 11 months, but the time for pupils has not been changed.

We are glad to see that educators are alert to changing times. Reduced parental supervision places more responsibility for "raising" on the teachers who must compete with radios, movies, and television.

US Can Not Afford One More 'Korea'

The propaganda value which they formerly enjoyed by using the UN as a sounding board. They seem to be unhappy over the unbroken support which the US has obtained from all but the Soviet satellites.

Finally, there is a possibility that the delegation may have been ordered to make some less unfriendly gesture, although the probability of that is remote.

If it develops that the Communist representatives mission is to take steps that will hamper UN action in Korea, there can be no better time than the present to put an end to the farcical theory that the free nations of the world can live within the United Nations with the Soviet and her satellites.

If Russia, wants a showdown in the United Nations, by all means she should be given the opportunity, and the sooner the better. It is time that the other world nations perceive where they stand in the UN line-up.

Hospital for his first ordeal with the surgeons. Manor House is the hospital which has long had a special arrangement with the Transport and General Workers Union (of which Bevin is a member) and socialist doctors conceded that he was within his right.

The roar of disapproval came when he had the second operation at the London Clinic and paid for the costs himself. It can hardly be concluded that socialized medicine is living up to its merits, at least for those of the upper class who can afford to deviate from the party line and be individualists.

An executive is a fellow who orders, directs and dictates all day long, and who then goes home and meekly dries the dishes.

When the other man is silent, don't think he is listening. He is waiting.

US Can Not Afford One More 'Korea'

By J. M. ROBERTS, JR. AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The United States, heavily engaged in building up the world's military defenses against Communist aggression and already involved in one small but difficult war, also faces the necessity of developing new lines of political action.

Caught in Korea with its plans down, the government cannot afford to let it happen again. Decisions must be made, and then implemented, on what we can and will do in case of outbreaks elsewhere.

Equally difficult will be the ways and means of handling Russia's return to the United Nations. First there will be a propaganda war fought there amid devious parliamentary maneuvering.

Some day, if not immediately, it seems likely that there will have to be a decision on whether we really want Russia to continue in the U. N.; or, whether there is any point in attempting to maintain a common meeting place with members who blatantly defy the will of the organization.

But the U. N. business involves only the side lights on the shooting. The big question now is whether the Communists shall be permitted to draw allied strength into a series of small and indecisive wars while Russia sits back, hoarding her own military strength for what she considers the opportune time.

Mechanical Pickers Received by A&M

Three mechanical pickers have been received at the college plantation, according to L. C. Eakin, superintendent of the plantation.

The mechanical pickers have been leased to the college to test the efficiency of operation on the type of cotton raised in the Brazos bottom.

Cotton on the plantation is in good condition this year, with a better-than-average yield anticipated.

'Crisis'-Huey Long Facism In South American Country

By FRED WALKER

"Crisis"—MGM—showing at the Palace Sunday through Wednesday—starring Jose Ferrer, Cary Grant, Paula Raymond.

Democracy versus Facism is the theme of "Crisis," as personalities and ideals clash in South America.

Russia to Place Chinese Reds' Bid Before UN

Lake Success, Aug. 1—(AP)—Soviet Russia disclosed tonight she is coming back to the United Nations security council primarily to reopen her fight to seat Communist China—and that she considers peace in Korea should be second on the program of business.

Jakob A. Malik, Russian who is to be council president for August, announced this agenda tonight. This foreshadowed a fight over the program at the opening of tomorrow's security council meeting—the first the Russians have attended since January.

It is customary for presidents of the security council to submit in advance an agenda, or program, for each session. He did so, shortly after adjournment of the council's last July meeting.

A U. S. resolution offered at today's meeting, denouncing North Korea defiance of the U. N. cease-fire orders, was left over for discussion tomorrow. It was designed to beat Russia to the punch in the new diplomatic battle expected to develop.

But the language in which Malik framed his order of business makes no place for the U. S. resolution.

U. N. officials were unable to get Malik to agree tonight to change his announced agenda.

The entire security council has to approve the order of the agenda before discussions can proceed. It is the first item of the order of business.

As Malik framed it, Russia wants to take up the question of seating the Chinese Communist representative. Up until now, all Russia has asked has been the ousting of the Chinese Nationalist delegate.

When Russia walked out, she said she would not return until the Nationalists were kicked out of the U. N.

Malik phrased the Korean situation this way: "peaceful settlement of the Korean question."

Technically, Malik still has the whip hand in fending off the U. S. resolution, but the council itself will have to decide that by ballot.

Under the Malik program, hours—probably days—of debate on the Chinese representation question might delay further discussion on the Korean question.

Cary Grant plays a well-known American brain surgeon who is touring South America on his honeymoon. The atmosphere is tense as revolution looms ever-nearer.

Grant and his wife (Paula Raymond) decide to leave the country because of the prevailing conditions, but enroute to their ship they are abducted by an Army officer and taken to the palace of the hated dictator, (Jose Ferrer) who fears death from a brain tumor.

The revolt breaks out in force and Ferrer takes the very life Grant has just saved. Strangely enough (yeah!) the revolutionary leader (Gilbert Roland) displays the same tyrannical tendencies that he has just helped to overthrow, but ironically he

WHERE THERE'S COKE, THERE'S FIRE

Editor, The Battalion: If our editor's don't have better things to print than their reply to Mr. Bayol's letter about Coca-Cola, they should resign and get back on the Dean's team for laughs.

This is purely personal, but I wish to state that I frankly don't care how much damage the unknown female reporter did to the Coke machine (she should be ashamed) or what she entertains with in her house.

After all, is false pride getting you down and you can't just admit you made a mistake?

If you'll consult a dictionary, you will find coke (lower case) means "a coal from which the volatile constituents have been removed by heating in ovens," and you could hardly drink it. (Or maybe you should try.) Perhaps it would be clearer if I told coke is principally carbon while Coke is a carbonated water drink. See what a difference the capital letter makes?

"Seriously," here's to more seriousness from the editors until they grow up and develop a true sense of humor.

Mrs. A. A. Williams Jr. P. S. I'm sure The Coca-Cola Company will appreciate the advertising on the front page of the July 28 issue.

LETTER FROM THE EDITORS

Readers, The Battalion:

We would again like to direct your notice to the statements which appear above this column. They require that all letters be signed, and, unless the writer gives sufficient reason that his name be withheld, the name will be printed with the letter.

We have received only one unsigned letter this summer. If the author of the letter will contact goes down before a sniper's bullet.

It seems as if there will be a new fad in the motion picture industry. A zither went plunk-plunk throughout "The Third Man"; a guitar Mona Lisaed all over the place in "Captain Carey, USA"; in "Crisis," another guitar strum-dums with verocity. We aren't ridiculing for the melody was quite haunting and the player quite deft.

Crisis is strictly a propaganda picture, but one above the ordinary. Grant and Ferrer don't turn in bad performances.

Though the characters are supposedly fictitious, the dictator and his wife bear an extraordinary typed-resemblance to a certain Peron family of Argentina.

Comment: Someone once asked the late Huey Long if he thought the United States would ever have Facism. Replied Long, "Sure we will—but we'll call it something else."

DO UNTO OTHERS . . .

(Ed. note—The following letter was received by I. E. "Monty" Montgomery, former Milner Hall student senator. Montgomery headed the committee to raise funds for contributions to the World Student Service Fund.)

Your generous contribution will help to relieve the distress of thousands of students in many parts of the world who are still hungry and cold and sick.

The spiritual value of your testimony of concern for their needs cannot be over estimated as a contribution to understanding and peace.

We thank you on behalf of these more needy members of the world community of university men and women.

Very sincerely yours, W. J. Kitchen Executive Secretary World Student Service Fund (With the letter was a receipt for A&M's contribution of $553.08.)
