Instructors Added To Geology Staff

Resignations of two instructors in the Geology Department were received during the summer and two new instructors were obtained, according to S. A. Lynch, head of the Geology Department.

W. H. LeRoy, 26, who received his B. S. in geology at the University of Nebraska in 1949, will be added to the Geology Department in September.

Son of Dr. R. H. LeRoy, head of Freshman Chemistry at A&M, he will teach macropaleontology.

Valletorian of his class at A&M in 1948, W. P. Ryman, completing work on his masters degree in geology, will be an instructor in the department during the Fall semester, Lynch said.

Two instructors, B. D. McGrath and J. N. Dahm, who were at A&M on temporary appointments, resigned; McGrath will go to Tarleton State as an assistant professor of geology, and Dahm will return to commercial employment.
