

Tickets Even In Korea

Corpus Christi—(AP)—A Marine arrested for speeding here July 18 failed to appear to pay his fine. Today the corporation court clerk received this letter:

"Dear Sir:

"In regards to this traffic ticket awarded me on July 18, 1950, I am very sorry I was unable to make the court procedures. I was, on July 19, 1950, immediately transferred from Naval Air Station, Corpus Christi, to front lines, Korea, with no notice.

"I would like very much to pay the fine ($5) but due to circumstances beyond my control, Korean currency is not recognized in the United States.

"Please place my ticket on file and when I return, if and when I do, I will gladly pay. With interest, if necessary.

Johnson Sings Swan Song

Washington, Sept. 19—(AP)—Louis Johnson, on the eve of leaving the cabinet job from which he was forced to resign, said tonight that good soldiers must be prepared to make sacrifices and that "goes for a secretary of defense as well."

On the war in Korea and on the need for the United States to remain militarily strong to assure peace, Johnson had these things to say:

"When all the facts become known about the stand of our heroic forces against insurmountable odds, their gallant fight will go down beside the most memorable battles in our history."

"We will win because we know how to make sacrifices. We know how to work for the common good."

Consolidated Band

Following the first time interlocking new maroon and white uniforms, members of the A&M Consolidated High School Band are shown preparing to play the school song during half-time activities at the Consolidated-Madisonville football game Friday night. The uniforms, which were received late in August were purchased through the efforts of local civic clubs and other interested groups of College Station. Carolyn Landess, drum major for the band holds her baton in position of attention for the playing of the school song.

Atomic Gas Found in Water Key to Hydrogen Bombs

Philadelphia—(AP)—Two scientists have discovered in ordinary water the colorless gas known as tritium—key explosive for hydrogen bombs.

A little tritium already has been made in American Atomic reactors and more is to be produced for H-bombs in reactors still to be built. The new water extraction method of making tritium shows promise of two very practical uses—but it is not expected to replace the reactor system of tritium manufacture.

The principal reason for this is that—although reactor tritium today is said to cost a half billion dollars a pound—the water extraction appears to be both less productive and more expensive.

The first anticipated use of the new water tritium is to discover the secret manufacture of H-bombs. In such work a very small amount of tritium spilled in water will spread widely and as a result of the newly-announced discovery may be detected easily.

A single gram—one 27th of an ounce—dropped into the mighty Amazon River could be traced anywhere downstream and even far out in the Atlantic Ocean.

The second practical use of the new detection method would come in tracing ocean currents right down to the bottom of the sea. Surface waters are known to contain more tritium than very deep water.

The tritium discoveries—announced at the Temple University Research Institute—were the work of W. F. Libby of the institute of nuclear studies, University of Chicago, and A. V. Grosse, of the Temple Institute.

Night school classes in Shorthand, Typing and Bookkeeping will begin October 16 at 7 p.m. For further information call 3-6655.

Men Appreciate MacArthur Directing Fight

Inchon, Korea, Sept. 19—(AP)—There is a strange and gratifying irony in Gen. MacArthur's personal leadership of Allied landing forces in the smashing offensive against the North Koreans.

Once before, in the Philippines, MacArthur was beaten temporarily and then came back to lead a vast invasion force which liberated the islands for the Filipinos.

Now, at the end of a desperate holding campaign, he has returned to another overrun country at the head of a powerful and confident force.

During his front-line inspection tour Sunday the General took professional interest in inspecting enemy dead. He remarked upon the Russian-style shoulder tabs worn by some of the khaki uniformed bodies.

One still had a Russian-made submachine gun slung across his shoulder. An officer picked it up and blood dripped from the barrel.

"It jammed on him," the officer said.

"Well, that's a good gun," MacArthur replied.

At an Inchon stockade MacArthur gazed grimly at Communist prisoners. If any of them recognized the General they hid their feelings.

Capt. John Griffin of Vallejo, Calif., the stockade commander, said 20 per cent of the prisoners were believed to be South Koreans impressed into service.

Inchon itself was in ruins. Virtually every downtown building had been hit by heavy naval shelling or aerial bombing and rocket attacks. The thunderous pre-invasion bombardment doubtless saved numerous American lives when the landings took place.

On the scarred flanks of Wolmi Island, a knob of land dominating Inchon Harbor, a Russian 76mm field gun still stood. It looked as if it had just come from the factory.

Supply Short

Akron, O.—(AP)—The nation's present rubber supply position is much better than it was in 1940, according to figures compiled by the B. F. Goodrich Co.

In 1940 the United States consumed 650,000 tons of rubber, 97 per cent of which was imported from the Far East. At that time this country had the capacity to produce only 4,500 tons of man-made rubber of all types.

Today the nation is consuming rubber at a rate of more than 1,000,000 tons a year but has facilities for producing 940,000 tons of American rubber. Output of man-made rubber will be at the rate of 740,000 tons early in 1951.

Chinese Reds Charged With Helping Koreans

By TOM OCHILTREE
AP Correspondent

Lake Success, Sept. 19—(AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur charged that Communist China provided a major share of the muscle of the North Korean army by swelling its ranks with 40,000 to 60,000 combat-seasoned troops of Korean origin.

Russia supplied the North Korean Communists with weapons and munitions sending in a wide variety of equipment as late as 1950, MacArthur said.

In his fourth report to the United Nations Security Council, MacArthur made it clear that this outside aid pumped up the striking power of the North Koreans to the point where they were able to launch their invasion of South Korea on June 25. The U. N. commander pointed out, for example, that North Korea's industry "is not capable of providing heavy equipment such as armor, tanks and artillery."

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob A. Malik tied the council up in a wrangle lasting more than two hours as he waged a losing fight to delay the reading of MacArthur's report. He finally was voted down 10 to one.

At the end of the reading, U. S. delegate Warren R. Austin introduced exhibits including a submarine. Malik ducked out of the chamber then.

Upon returning to the meeting Malik called MacArthur an "obscurantist fascist" and said the general's report was a "blood-thirsty document trying to justify American aggression in Korea."

He accused the U. S. Air Force of attacking civilians and bombing schools, hospitals and homes. Malik maintained that the Soviet Union sold weapons to the North Koreans only when Russian troops withdrew in December 1948.

Malik's 22-minute speech was a reiteration of Communist claims that the United States is the aggressor in Korea—claims which have been completely rejected by the non-Communist world. The council adjourned without fixing a date for its next meeting.
