

Taft Lashes Out at Truman For 'Appeasing Communists'

Washington, Sept. 20 — (AP)—Senator Taft (R-Ohio) today accused the Truman administration of "appeasing the Communists" and of helping to build Russia's military might.

The Ohio lawmaker, chairman of the senate republican policy committee, also suggested that appeasement of the Reds is the surest way to bring about World War III. "Communism has always been a threat to the American people," Taft declared, "but the present military strength of Russia is largely the result of the foreign policy of the Roosevelt and Truman administrations."

He added that the two democratic administrations followed a policy at the Yalta and Potsdam conferences "which placed Russia in a dominating position in Central Europe from which they can successfully threaten the liberty of Western Europe and of the United States."

Both administrations, Taft declared, have displayed a "sympathy for Communism." He said Secretary of State Acheson's policy of "contemplating surrender of Formosa" and "recognition of the Chinese Communists was only reversed when the Korean war occurred." Then Taft said:

which will leave when scheduled from the Main Lounge.

Although facilities in the center are only about two-thirds complete and many of the activities are only in the organizational stage, guides will attempt to show the completed set-up of the center.

Due to various unexpected setbacks, the Center will not be fully furnished and equipped until the first of the coming year. Much of the delay is due to the present international situation.

The building, however, will now be in continuous operation. New facilities will be utilized and new furnishings installed as they become available.

Committees Formed

The organizational set-up of the Center is already in the building stage. A few groups such as the Gallery Committee and the Bridge Club have been functioning since last year.

In the developing stage at present are the Music Committee, Publicity Committee, House Committee and Crafts Committee.

Other student-operated groups will be added to the organizational set-up as the demand for them warrants.

The present and proposed groups will offer students leisure recreation and relaxation and provide them with social and cultural training.

A&M's Living Room

The cultural and social aspects of the building, bridging a long-standing gap in the A&M curriculum, have led to its nickname "A&M's Living Room."

The recognized need for such provisions at the college led to groundwork being laid for the present structure more than a decade ago. The Center reached the paper-stage in the mid-forties and became an actual construction undertaking two years ago today when F. C. Bolton, president emeritus of the College, first broke the ground.

The Center is for the joint use of the students, former students, faculty and staff members of the College and residents of the community.

Batt Staffers Meet Freshmen

All freshmen interested in working on The Battalion in any capacity are invited to attend a meeting in The Battalion office on second floor Goodwin Hall this evening at 7:15, the co-editors announced this morning.

Members of the regular staff will be on hand to furnish information and departmental editors will discuss arrangements for freshmen to join their staffs.

All writers and editors on last year's Batt are also invited to attend the meeting.

Refreshments will be served and the meeting will be closed in plenty of time from freshmen to get back to their dorms before call to quarters, the co-editors said.

All Air Force distinguished military students will meet Monday at 5 p. m. in Building D temporary classroom area, room 12 with Col. W. C. Napier, PAMS&T.

'Hands off Berlin' Big 3 Warns Reds

New York, Sept. 20—(AP)—The big three foreign ministers today warned Russia to keep hands off Berlin and Western Germany, decided to end the state of war with Germany, and authorized a fast-moving West German police force of 40,000 men.

The warning to the Soviet Union—and the Communist was not specifically written into a long communique issued here at the end of week-long talks by Secretary of State Dean Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

But the ministers renewed their pledge to back up completely the Bonn government and Berlin, and there was no doubt among the diplomats here that that pledge was meant to be heard in the Kremlin.

The big three announced the following decisions:

- To consider any attack against the Western German government or Berlin from any quarter as an attack upon themselves. To do this, they agreed to increase and reinforce their forces in Germany for more effective protection.

- To terminate the state of war with Germany as soon as possible. This will be a complicated process, requiring for this country the approval of the United States Congress. It will not affect domestic United States legislation as long as the state of war with Japan is still effective.

- To increase the mobile police forces in the western zones from the 10,000 men now authorized to 40,000, equipped and trained to take care of riots and internal disturbances. The guard may be equipped with armored reconnaissance vehicles to permit fast movement. An American official, Henry C. Byroade, director of the Bureau of German Affairs of the U. S. State Department, said: "This is not a disguised move to meet the Bereitschaften (East German police force)."

- To study further the question of creating German military units for use in a combined defense force to protect European freedom. French opposition to rearming Germany was a key factor in holding off an agreement on this point at this time, but the ministers said they would continue conversations from time to time on the subject.

- To give the firmest support to efforts of the United Nations to resist threats to the peace and
