Aggies Seeking 3rd Victory
 At Expense Of Oklahoma

Highly Rated Sooners
 Out To Get 23rd Win

By Roger Coslett

A&M's Maroon and White horde invades Norman, Okla. this Saturday in quest of victory number three, this time at the expense of the highly rated Oklahoma Sooners.

The Aggies, fresh from victories over Nevada and Texas Tech, will be trying to stop the Sooner's victory string at 22.

Oklahoma walloped out a decisive 28-0 victory over Boston College last weekend. Although this was not so good a showing as last year's 46 to 0 rout of Boston, it gives no indication that the defending Sugar Bowl champs will field a team inferior to that of their last two successful seasons.

Wilkinson Confident

Coach-of-the-Year, Bud Wilkinson, admits that his Sooners will have a good team, but says, "Other teams also are going to be good." If the Aggies look as good Saturday as they have in their past two games, barring mistakes, and bad breaks Coach Wilkinson may see one of those "other teams."

After having lost three men to the armed forces, the 34-year old mentor still finds himself with a wealth of material. Backing up a dozen and half returning lettermen is a brilliant group of sophomores. On how well these sophomores develop may well hang the key to future Sooner victories.

Leon Heath Is Back

Line crashing Leon Heath, a fullback, is the only starter back from last year's offensive team. He will no doubt see considerable service from his berth on Wilkinson's split T formation.

Oklahoma led the nation in rushing and defense against rushing last year on the strength of their powerful line play. Whether or not Wilkinson can rebuild that line, what with the loss of All-American Tackle Wade Walker and others to match his running power is the question that as yet remains unanswered.

All told, Oklahoma lost 10 men from last year's starting team including his star quarterback Darrell Royal. Royal was the nucleus of the Sooner's kicking attack.

Will Miss Walker

No doubt Sooner backs will miss having Walker clear the way for them in the line but they may find some consolation at the guard post where 210-pound Clair Mayes has taken over. Letterman Bert Clark, 198, may shade Norman McNabb, 195-pound co-captain for the other terminal.

Four lettermen are vying for tackle positions. The leading two thus far have been Art James, 205 and Dean Smith, 210. At the end positions will be Frankie Anderson, a second stringer last year, but top contender for the right flanking spot this year. The left end position has turned into a five way race with Troy Keller, a brilliant pass-snaring speedster leading the way. Close behind him are Jack Lockett and Ed Lisak.

Harry Moore 200-pound co-captain seems to have the center spot well in hand.

Arnold Is Good Passer

In the back field Claude Arnold will try to fill the shoes vacated by quarterback Darrell Royal. Arnold is an apt ball handler and slick passer. Backing him up will be Eddie Crowder and Bill Blair.

Billy Vessels, a sophomore, may possibly outshine returning lettermen at one of the half back slots. He is a capable passer, a flashy runner and fine defensive player. Silva is currently running from the other halfback slot but is being pushed by second stringers Dick Heatley and Tommy Gray. Heatley will probably handle the kicking chores for the Sooners.

Sophomore Buck McPhail, 202, bolsters the fullback slot behind All-American candidate Leon Heath.

Aggie Line Shines

The Aggies with the same backfield as last year, but a vastly improved line will provide the test for the Oklahoma forward wall. Stalwarts such as Andy Hillhouse, Jimmy Flowers, Max Greiner, Bob Bates, Sam Moses, Carl Melberg, Alvin Langford, Dorbandt Barton and Marshall Rush, plus others just as capable will attempt to clear the way for hard charging backs.

Leading the attack to Oklahoma will be quarterback Delmer Sikes. Sikes after spending three years as a squadman has finally come into his own. His passing thus far has accounted for four of the Aggies' 12 touchdowns. Bolstering the Aggie running game will be Bruisin' Bob Smith who currently leads the conference in scoring with 36 points. Smith boasts an average of five yards per carry.

Boast Leading Ball Carriers

The Conference's leading ball carriers, Billy Tidwell, 114 yards per carry, and Glenn Lippman, with a 10.6 average, will operate for A&M from the right and left halfback spots respectively. Lippman also holds down the number two spot in punt returns with a neat 28 yard average.

Should the Aggies be forced to kick they may rely on the toe of Yan Lary. Lary has a 36.6 punting average thus far. He holds down the number four spot in conference punting.

But in all, the balance of this week's outcome seems to lie with the line. If it can continue to open holes for the shifty Aggie backs and close them against the Oklahomans the Aggies may make headlines across the nation.
