Battle Royal In Store As Cadets, Keydets Vie

Battle Lines Are Drawn, Field Generals Ready

By Roger Coslett

The Cadets of A&M will bring all their big guns to bear on the Keydets of Virginia Military Institute when the two teams meet this Saturday night on Kyle Field in what promises to be a grand slam battle.

It will be a case of military power versus military power with the outcome resting on what caliber troops the field generals have at their disposition and how well they deploy them.

Front liners for the Red, White and Yellows from Lexington, Va. will be 15 pounds heavier per man than any V.M.I. team since before the war. The Keydets boast depth as well as weight in both the offensive and defensive line positions from tackle to tackle.

Captain Kirby Bernich, 170, and two other returning lettermen will bolster the attack at center for the Keydets. What Bernich lacks in weight he makes up in fight. Close behind him for center honors is Tom Hedge—185.

27 Returning Lettermen

These are but three of 27 returning lettermen from the team that last year won three, tied one and lost five. These 27 lettermen played a big part in the Keydets' season opener victory over William and Mary.

A loss to George Washington followed the William and Mary victory, with some prestige being regained last weekend when the Keydets rebounded to trounce Richmond 26-14.

At the right guard slot for coach Tom Nugent's eleven will be a sophomore, Tommy Bonnett—185. He was injured in the Washington fray but is expected to be ready for the tilt against the Aggies. Weir Goodman—200, doubles as offensive guard or defensive right end. Other strong contenders for the guard spot are Jerry Eggleston and Rob Leighty two men who are rumored to be mighty fast on their feet.

Six lettermen seem to answer the team's guard problems. Top among them are Joe Adeeb—225 and Jack Frankeberger—210. Bill Lauerman—195 has so far shaped up as the best tackle in the defensive Keydet line.

Besides Goodman the Keydets will probably have E. L. Quisenberry—184 to bolster their defensive flanking positions. Offensive ends so far seemed well manned by Neal Petre and Jay Grumbling, two juniors each over six feet in height.

Fairly Fast Backfield

Behind this wall is a light but fairly fast backfield. Field general for the V.M.I. attack will be either Jimmy Coley or Joe Marchand. Both are apt passers. This quarterback position has proved the major problem especially since Nugent has come up with his new "I-T" formation.

The "I-T" formation, invented by Nugent, completely surprised William and Mary and deserves much of the credit for the win. But by the time the George Washington game came along their scouts had had time to prepare a defense against it.

Halfbacks are plentiful and up until halfback Fred Anson's injury this was one of the brighter spots on the squad. Anson, 155-pound left halfback is expected to be in shape by this weekend though.

George Chumbley—178 sophomore flash handles most of the kicking duties from his right halfback post but he too has been injured and it is doubtful whether or not he will see action this weekend. Ready to fill in at either of the halfback posts are Jack Lowden, Bland Wilson or Tommy Birge.

Stump Is Big Gun

Big gun of the V.M.I. attack is 192-pound Joe Stump a fullback that blasts his way through would be tacklers.

This will be the first meeting between "The West Point of the South" and the Aggies since Virginia Military Institute was founded in 1839.
