Worst Drought May Yet Come

By ASSOCIATED PRESS
Drought has swung an economic haymaker at half a dozen southern western states. Government over-optimists say the worst may be yet to come.

Extreme lack of rain threatens to disrupt agriculture in Texas, Arizona and New Mexico. The dry also extends across roughly the southern halves of Colorado, Utah and Nevada.

There's even talk of another dust bowl, similar to that which wind-ravaged topsoil of the great plains in the 1930s. Conjecture dwells on such conditions recurring in 20-year cycles.

Periods in which no rain, or rain has fallen range up to four years across much of this region, say that in some areas now the water droughts have half reverence.

C. of C. Sets Membership Drive Date

Letters explaining the aims and purposes of the College Station Chamber of Commerce will be sent to all prospective members to launch the drive for membership in the organization, Joe Sorrels, president, said Monday after meeting with committeemen.

Ray Oden, Marion Pugn and J. E. Roberts comprise the membership committee.

The drive, staged annually, will seek to contact all local businessmen and residents who may be interested in joining the group. Membership is open to any resident or businessman who is interested in the improvement of social and civic conditions in the city, Sorrels said.

The Chamber of Commerce is beginning to prepare the Russian people for war.

In Blues-Singing, 'Mammy' Style

Hollywood, Jan. 23—(AP)—Blues-singing—one of the Negro's prime contributions to American culture—is a minor art that seems to elude white singers with but few exceptions.

One of the exceptions is a lively young lady named Kay Starr.

Devotees of the blues and jazz shouting school this year have placed the five-foot-two and eyes-of-green singer in the top echelon along with such great exhibitioners as Ethel Waters, Ella Fitzgerald, Billie Holiday and Mildred Bailey.

Until Starr's emergence, Miss Bailey, Connie Boswell and Dinah Shore (on occasion) have rated as the only songbirds who have been able to simulate the true blues spirit.

But none of these—on records, at least—ever managed the gutty (there is no better word) quality that Miss Starr gets into her work.

Starr's style of singing has put her among the year's top recording artists. Capitol Records reports more than 2,000,000 of her records sold in 1950. Two of them—"Bonaparte's Retreat" and "I'll Never Be Free" (the latter a hill-billy tinged duet with Tennessee Ernie)—have passed the 500,000 mark.

Adjust your speed to the traffic and weather conditions.

It does not necessarily follow, of course, that the names of those most noted today will live the longest in the future. Among 20th Century Greats may be a worker in an obscure laboratory, a writer of books unknown to the critics, a preacher in little-traveled fields. Some of the greatest figures of the past were not recognized in their own time on earth.

But there is no doubt, as of now, that when the half century's story is told it will be a story of triumph.

Kremlin May Be Preparing Russian People For War

By J. M. ROBERTS, JR.
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

It looks like the Kremlin is beginning to prepare the Russian people for war.

For several weeks newspapers and speakers have been going beyond the old warmongering talk about the United States, playing upon Russian fears of a revived Germany.

Now, the Russians are being told that the United States has nurtured territorial ambitions against the Caucasus for 33 years.

Russian diplomacy, in notes to France and Britain regarding German rearmament, takes the form of war threats.

To permit of tax Kremlin, having broken the communists' agreement by rearmament in Germany, now grows to a comysterial in the face of all was necessitations to do so in Western units do not market via it at its roughest note went to son's "adjust an obvious effort to play rate repre country's own fear of a bill in rel only preliminary to Rus value of a ciation of the anti-Ger done in city of 1944. pulsion to consider Russian public opinion. But this is only partly true. Like other peoples, the Russians want no war. The love of liberty smoulders among them just as when they made their revolution against the Czars—the revolution which has been so turned against them by the communists. The Kremlin probably knows that a war outside Russia would not be popular.

The Russian fear of a revived Germany is not just pretended. Germany nearly brought Russia to her knees. Had it not been for allied assistance—the supply from abroad of 20 per cent of the war materials used for Russian defense—all would have been over for Stalin & Co. The Kremlin doesn't forget that.

Russia may be having other troubles. There is something in the air—some new optimism about the U. N. military position in Korea, the new American frankness regarding Formosa—which suggests that a flaw may have been found in the Moscow-Peking entente.

The sounds from deep in the forest of international affairs suggests that the bear may be coming to bay.
