From the Women's Desk

(This reporter knows by experience!) So we cornered Aggieland '51 (This reporter knows by experience!) So we cornered Aggieland '51 Editor Roy Nance and found that the yearbook is progressing according to schedule. "We are ahead of where they were this time last year," Nance told us. He said that 50 per cent of the book will be in the hands of publishers by April 15. . . . Also of importance to graduating seniors is the fact that they should make arrangements now for delivery of next year's annual to their permanent addresses. For a twenty-five cent mailing fee—paid to the Student Activities Office—the book will reach any door designated by the senior as soon next year as it is off the presses.

Don Rogers, A Sig senior, is planning a busy summer.
In June he will celebrate his graduation with a new job.
Then in July he'll ask for time enough to make Harriet Hilliard of Dallas his Mrs. Rogers.... The Houston Hobo Hop during the Easter holidays was attended by some 200-strong... and a good time reported by all of them.

Not in a long, long time have we had so much fun as at Monday night's dinner and organization gathering of Mustang alumni in the Bryan-College Station area. Fun is always plentiful when "old grads" get together to talk over the "good old days." In attendance at Monday's MSC dinner were a number of people who are good Aggies, the husbands of Mustang alums. Our own dinner partners were Mr. and Mrs. E. E. McQuillan, she a former Mustang, and they the parents of Judy McQuillan, recent Mustang grad... Among the association's new officers is Thelma Elkins, employee of the library and wife of Elmer Elkins, engineering major from Dallas.

Fire Hazard

"From the viewpoint of electric utilities," he said "we have definite problems facing us. Perhaps the most critical one is from the fire hazard to our major cities."

He emphasized that cities are dependent upon electrical energy to pump water. Few, he says, have any provisions for emergency standby in case of power failure.
Thus, a power failure would stop a city's water supply.

Speaking of new designs for outdoor electrical stations, Rode reviewed known facts about atomic bomb shock waves.

Arvin or Dinuba? These are two towns of approximately the same size in the San Joaquin Valley in California. A study of the communities was made beginning in the summer of 1944 by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, lay buried two years because of political pressures, was finally made public by the Senate Committee for Small Business. The agricultural aspect of the study, while predominant, is not of direct local importance to us, because this is not a farming community. But the fact that Dinuba, the far better town had TWO INDEPENDENT BUSI-NESS ESTABLISHMENTS TO EVERY ONE IN ARVIN was of interest not only to the Small Business Committee, but should be of importance to all of us,

Recently, the thirteenth independent retail grocery passed from the scene right here in College Station, since our arrival here some ten years ago. Certainly this does not indicate that a healthy business climate exists locally for the small businessman.

Yet, how very important it is to all of us that our local business enterprises prosper and multiply. Not alone as sources of taxes without which our local schools and city government can never reach the peak of service we expect of them, but it is the prospering local businessman who may always be looked to for support and frequently for inspiration for the many little refinements that go to raise our community from the commonplace to the exceptional.

Thus, in DINUBA, we see our Goal.

We might well be at the Crossroads. Fortunately, through a comparative analysis of Arvin and Dinuba, we can see clearly what lies at the end of the respective roads. Our admonition: Try to spend your dollar at College Station and an independent store FIRST.
