

Objections to Proposal Aired

to Barnes proposal were that:

- It would tend to divide student thinking along class lines, and result in occasional veto of senior class wishes, which several members of the audience thought would be detrimental to the Cadet Corps.
- The Co-ordinating Committee would be a figurehead body if it only echoed the vote of individual classes.
- Strong objection was raised to representatives being instructed how to vote on each issue.
- Mathematically, the Council (because of varying class sizes) could be instructed to vote a particular way on an issue when a majority of the student body held an opposing view.

In Favor of New Plan

A summary of views favoring the Co-ordinating Committee plan were that:

- Greater participation in student government would result if legislation was taken to the classes.
- Each class would have a more equal representation with the greatest strength lying with the older, better informed senior group.
- Student body opinion could be gained quickly through the classes.
- Committee work could be done by men from classes, which would promote greater interest.
- A smaller body could work more efficiently, spending less time on individual issues.

Senate Operations Discussed

Several points were raised in opposition to present operations of the Senate. Four or five students pointed out that Senators did not represent, but voted as they saw fit.

The opposition countered that "representative government was meant to function in that manner, because each man did not have time to inform himself on all issues."

The group discussed top student leaders relation to each other and to the student body, in an effort to define their authority and determine which was most important to student government.

Opinion of the group leaned noticeably toward a more liberal, democratic student government, with a stronger, more military Cadet Corps.

Radical Change Opposed

Opposing a radical change, a number of audience speakers urged more attention to the Senate and an increased effort to improve it and its operation.

Another student pointed out that

Three Talks Set By E. R. Alexander

E. R. Alexander, head of the Ag Ed department, will deliver three talks this month at Ballinger, McGregor and San Diego.

He will speak at the parents and sons FFA banquet at Ballinger tonight.

On May 22 he will deliver the principal address at a meeting of the McGregor chamber of commerce and on May 31 he will talk at the graduation program of the GIs (vets in training program), at which certificates will be awarded, at San Diego.

a new organization might have many hidden pitfalls, but that basically the Senate was well organized and needed only greater student interest.

Several suggestions for changes to the present Senate were considered. To stimulate student interest, it was proposed to hold two elections for senators each year, giving dormitories an opportunity to elect a new man if they were dissatisfied.

Seniors Elect Senate Prexy

Suggesting that student government needed backing of the Senior Class, one student proposed that the Seniors elect the Senate President from senior members of the Senate.

Another recommendation was for more student body votes on important issues, thereby giving them a greater chance to participate.

Panel leaders Parse and Barnes both said after the meeting that more such discussions should be held in an effort to determine what improvements could be made in student government at A&M.

And almost every member of the audience said at one time or another that lack of student interest was the greatest threat to any kind of student governing body.

Chiang Talks

ted States much wealth, I asked if any such wealth had been recovered and used for the benefit of all China.

Sources here said Chiang's reply was the first comment he ever has made on this subject.

"For many years," Chiang said, "The Chinese government has made inquiries of the United States government seeking cooperation and information as to Chinese who had taken wealth to the United States.

"We requested the United States government to inform us of this so that we could then take all measures to return this wealth or treasure to its rightful owners, the government of China.

"So far, our talks have produced no results. We are ready to proceed to reclaim any money taken from China to use it for the general good of the people."
