Smith Goes

as regular line smashes that Smith's name was a byword at the Monday morning quarterback club meetings around the country.

To prove to the unbelievers in the East, Bob took the opening kickoff against Georgia and moved an even 100 yards down the gridiron to put the Aggies in the lead with only 17 seconds of the game elapsed and the Bulldogs never did recover from the glow. That wasn't all he did as he amassed a total of 323 yards that December day. Look for Smith this Fall as he will be running about 10 opponents ragged with his antics with a football. And look for Smith to make all the all-America teams this year, not just a few choice ones.

Ferrar, Robeson Will Lead Cast for Shakespeare Play

Academy Award winner Jose Ferrar and famous Negro singer Paul Robeson will lead the cast in a recorded presentation of Shakespeare's "Othello" in the MSC Assembly Room, Thursday at 7:30 p. m.

The program is being arranged by students in English 212, currently studying the plays of Shakespeare. It will include adequate interpretation of the play and of Elizabethan drama in general to aid persons who might not be acquainted with "Othello" or Shakespeare's plays.

First Presentation

The recorded presentation will be the first undertaking of its kind to be offered for the general public on the campus. It was begun as a class project in the belief that several students and local residents would welcome the chance to hear a Shakespearean play presented by known artists.

Paul Robeson plays the title role in this Columbia Masterworks version of the famous tragedy. Jose Ferrar is cast as Iago, Othello's villainous ensign. Ferrar won this year's Academy Award for his performance in the title role of the motion picture "Cyrano de Bergerac."

Ferrar's wife, Uta Hagen, plays the part of Desdemona, Venetian lady who wed Othello against the advice of her parents. Both she and Ferrar have studied voice professionally and appear in occasional operatic performances.

"Othello" has been called by some critics Shakespeare's greatest triumph as a stage play. It's most notable features, according to one Shakespearean authority, is its concentration and design. Another authority alludes to its "structural unity and intensity which makes it... the most admirably ordered of all his (Shakespeare) tragedies."

The plot concerns the destruction of Othello, the Moor of Venice, by Iago, his trusted officer. A professional soldier, Othello falls in love with Desdemona, the beautiful daughter of Brabantio, a senator of Venice. The daughter, a devoted but innocent wife, is used by Iago as a means for destroying Othello bit by bit.

Authorities differ as to what prompts Iago to his consuming

get things done

Colonial America relied on men riding in darkness to rally the nation to its own defense. Those who rode "to spread the alarm" provided our country's emergency communication — and a spectacular page in our history.

An equally vital service is provided by the Telephone Company in times of national emergency. Telephone wires are the cords that bind our nation together . . . the messages that flow through them are the vital heartbeats of the country.

When national defense increases the tempo of these messages . . . when the Telephone Company — telephone people and telephone equipment — are called on to provide an even greater service, it is comforting to know this vital channel of communication can be quickly made ready to meet whatever emergencies arise.
