Eighth Son Now Enrolled

Marshall's Have Biggest A&M Family

Back in 1910 a student by the name of V. C. Marshall from Temple registered at A&M. After studying one year, he left school to return to the farm.

But A&M had not heard the last of the Marshall family.

Marshall's eighth son, Ellis, registered at the college this summer to begin a four-year course of study. The other seven had already graduated from A&M.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall have no daughters. And when their youngest son graduates from college, theirs probably will be the largest 100 per cent A&M family on record.

Their first son, R. P., came to A&M in 1928. From then until the United States' entry into World War II in 1941, one of the Marshall boys, and sometimes two, were enrolled.

Five of the eight boys served in the Army and Air Force during the war, and a sixth, James, now is in the Army attending electronics school at St. Louis University.

Six of the eight boys graduated from the A&M School of Agriculture. The seventh majored in industrial education, and the eighth is taking a pre-medical course.

R. P. Marshall graduated with a degree in dairy husbandry in 1933. He served as a captain in the Army during World War II and now is agricultural representative of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railway Company, Marlin.

J. A. Marshall graduated in agricultural education in 1937 and later received a master's degree this year. Now in the Army, he is attending an electronics school at St. Louis University.

Howard B. Marshall had his education interrupted by the war, but he returned to A&M after it was over to get a degree in agricultural education. He now is farming at Temple, Route 3. He served in the Army as a private, first class.

Chester Marshall, who now is teaching vocational agriculture in Bartlett public schools, received his agricultural education degree in 1944. He also served as a private, first class, in the Army.

James R. Marshall graduated from A&M in industrial education attending an electronics school at St. Louis University.

V. C. Marshall raised his eight boys on his 400 acre farm in the Reed's Lake Community eight miles south of Temple, and from there sent them to A&M. It is the same farm that Mr. Marshall's grandfather settled on when he came to Texas in 1849.

Although Mr. Marshall's college education was abbreviated, he recognized the need to educate all his sons. He is vitally interested in scientific agriculture and in addition to operating his 400-acre farm, he has served as administrator for the State Soil Conservation Board, with headquarters in Temple, since 1937.

His farming is diversified, and that has enabled him, indirectly to send his sons to college.

Mr. Marshall found that each one of his sons was interested in some particular phase of agriculture. And because he conducted a diversified farming operation, he was able to give each of the boys, during their four years in Temple high school, a project of the kind they were interested in.

Working on the project each afternoon after school, on Saturdays and during the summer, the boys themselves earned enough money to go a long way toward putting themselves through A&M.

And realizing the good start their dad had given them in life, they didn't forsake him after they went off to college. Each summer they returned home to help him on the farm.

GRAND CENTRAL STATION
... at the turn of the lane

Lars Olsen has often said, "Those New York folks could get along without Grand Central Station before Lars Olsen could get along without his barn!" And Lars really has a point. For his barn is the throbbing pulse of the Olsen farm. Day by day, out of it and into it move his livestock, his equipment, and the fruits of his labor. It is the hub of his own world of industry and commerce.

But Lars has also remarked, "We Olsens could get along without our barn before we could get along without our church!"

And Lars is serious! He has learned that a man's religion is the power in his life, that Christian habits and ideals give meaning and purpose to his efforts and his achievements.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL ... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.
