The primary job of these men is to maintain radio contact with aircraft flying in this area.

Beetle Epidemic Plagues Southeastern Timberlands

Timberland owners of the southeast Texas area suffering from the epidemic of pine bark beetles have reported that 43,000,000 board feet of sawlogs and 25,000 cords of pulpwood had been killed during the past year. Of this total, 23,600,000 board feet of sawlogs and 23,000 cords of pulpwood were reported as being salvaged.

These estimates were made at a meeting of forest landowners at Cleveland recently. The purpose of the meeting of forest landowners was to review the status of bark beetles activity and to discuss the urgency of continued control measures. Over 50 foresters and small industrial forest landowners were present.

New Infestation Areas
Victor Suneson, assistant district forester for the Texas Forest Service, stated that many new areas of infestation were occurring in the problem area. He reported that minor outbreaks have been noted in northeast Harris County. Suneson also stated that control work done during the past winter by timberland owners had a definite effect in reducing the spread of the insect this year, but he pointed out that the bark beetles are still epidemic.

George Stanley, chairman of the Forestry Committee of the Texas Lumber Manufacturers Association, explained control measures and their effectiveness on lands of the Kirby Lumber Corporation.

Mexico, U. S. Sign Migrant Labor (Bracero) Agreement

Mexico City, Aug. 3—(AP)—Mexico and the United States tonight signed a new migrant labor (bracero) agreement which may start Mexican harvest hands flowing to U. S. fields within ten days.

The agreement—reached after negotiators broke a deadlock over a week—is still subject to ratification by both governments.

One negotiator said the only thing which would prevent ratification would be discovery of some legal flaw in the wording. Ratification by an exchange of notes between the U. S. Embassy here and the Mexican Foreign Office is expected next week.

Guarantee Payment

The agreement provides that the United States will guarantee payment of wages of Mexicans hired by U. S. farmers. Mexico has said she will not renew the agreement after six months unless the U. S. applies penalties to farmers using illegal migrants (wetbacks).

The signing, after 18 days of negotiations, was held in the ballroom of the foreign office. Consul General Carl Strom, head of the U. S. delegation, presided. In final speeches, both groups praised the understanding and cooperation of the others.

The negotiations had been deadlocked for nearly a week before the U. S. and Mexican delegates compromised on the question of establishment a migrant recruiting center in Guadalajara, Mexico. There was no dispute over the location of other centers.

Chosen In Guadalajara

Under the compromise, workers will be chosen in Guadalajara, thus meeting Mexican demands. But instead of being moved to the U. S. in special trains, they will go to Nogales any way they please. The worker who arrives in Nogales with his labor contract will be repaid the expenses of his trip.

This important condition meets the U. S. objection that the overtaxed Southern Pacific of Mexico Railroad cannot supply enough special trains to move all the workers needed from the Guadalajara area. Leaving the question of transportation up to the worker himself means he can go by truck, automobile, by regular train or by catching a ride on freight trains.

The U. S. will pay the worker only the cost of his transportation from Hermosillo, Mexico. The U. S. under this compromise did not obligate itself to take any certain number of workers from Guadalajara.

Recruiting centers in Mexico will be established at Aguascalientes, Guadalajara, Irapuato, Monterrey and Chihuahua. Hermosillo is not listed as a center, but the two governments by joint agreement may open other centers later.

Reception centers in the U. S., where farmers may go to obtain laborers, will be in Brownsville, Laredo and El Paso, Texas; Nogales, Arizona; and Calexico, Calif. Others may be opened later if both governments agree.

The new agreement continues the Mexican blacklist—a list of areas where it will not send its workers because it finds discrimination against Mexicans. But the means of proving such discrimination have been changed to give the U. S. greater voice in deciding whether they shall be blacklisted.

Must Not Discriminate

If the U. S. does not agree about discrimination in an area "local government officers" shall sign a promise to end the practice and workers shall be sent. In the past, U. S. labor authorities find that reports of Mexican consuls on the spot have been the basis for determining discriminations.

The agreement forbids the employment of illegal Mexican immigrants and provides that any farmer knowingly using them shall lose his legally contracted workers. He must also pay the legal worker three quarters of the salary he would normally have earned during his work contract.

However, this penalty is not to be applied except "when such employer knows or has reasonable grounds to believe or suspect or by reasonable inquiry could have ascertained" that his employees are illegally in the U. S.

Worker Agreement

Workers under the agreement may be used for "handling, drying, packing, processing, freezing, grading or storing" farm products, if the employer produced at least half the crop being processed.

The U. S. must give 30 days notice of how many workers it wants and where it wants them recruited in Mexico. Mexico must answer within 15 days, saying how many can be furnished from each area.

The U. S. officials here estimated it would take at least 10 days to open the new recruiting stations. However, those now in operation in Monterrey and Chihuahua, working on applications for workers made under the old agreement, will continue to work, they said.

Mexican workers must have completed with Mexico's conscription law but will not be liable to drafting into the U. S. armed forces.

Adequate Housing

Workers may not be sent to areas where the U. S. Secretary of Labor finds that housing, sanitary facilities or drinking water are "inadequate." Originally Mexico had asked that a decision on such matters be left to her consuls.

Work contracts for Mexican laborers may be ordered ended if U. S. labor authorities find there is sufficient domestic labor available in the area. In this case the employer must still pay his Mexican employees three quarters of what they would have earned if they had worked the full term of the contract.

Work contracts may be for from six weeks to six months. They may be renewed, but no Mexican worker may remain in the U. S. for more than a year. The worker is allowed to choose the type of farm work.

Wages must be those prevailing in the area, but must be sufficient to cover the worker's "normal living needs." Prevailing wages will not be those which have been "adversely affected by the employment of illegal workers in the area." Mexico has charged that use of alien migrants, who cannot complain of low wages, has had the effect of depressing U. S. wages scales in some areas.
