

Girls for Pops with Gout

Scientist Discovers Bald Fathers Have More Boys

Washington, Aug. 17—(AP)—If you're bald, mister, the chances are you'll have more boy children than girls, a scientist suggested yesterday.

Dr. Marianne E. Bernstein of the Istituto Di Statistiche in Rome, Italy, also came up with these views.

Fathers suffering from gout will probably have more girls than boys.

Men engaged in "aggressive, extrovert" occupations in which women have seldom become outstanding—such as soldiers, lawyers, farmers, abstract scientists like astronomers, mathematicians, and so forth, the sex ratio of 5,400 children was found to be 120 boys for every 100 girls.

"However, in families where the fathers were in professions in which many famous women were engaged—actors, social workers, child educators, fiction writers and all kinds of artists—the sex ratio for 1,800 children was found to be 85 boys for every 100 girls born."

Dr. Bernstein reported in the technical journal "Science" that she believes factoring the "sex ratio" of offspring are identical with, or act through, factors which control a man's balance of male and female sex hormones.

(All men have both male and female hormones in their systems, but the male ones predominate. Dr. Bernstein's suggestions appear to be that the balance can be upset under certain conditions so that some men have more of the male hormones than others.)

She pointed out that gout is a disturbance of the endocrine gland system of which the sex hormones set-up is a part.

Also, she said, male sex hormones play a role in the development of baldness.

Reporting on statistical and other studies she and her colleagues made among a large number of American families, the doctor said:

"Bald men were found to have 40 percent more male offspring than men with full hair or with receding hairline that had not de-

Total Of 882 Civilians Now At Bryan AFB

Civilian employment has reached a total of 882 at Bryan AFB, it was announced yesterday by spokesmen of the major contractors and the Texas Employment Agency.

Of the total, 715 are employed in the rehabilitation program at Bryan AFB, with the remaining 167 in civil service positions.

Earle L. Jones, project manager for Steinberg and Sons, said his company and 12 sub-contractors now have 663 at the task of renovating the buildings on the base.

He went on to say the present strength represented the peak of employment in his company, however, officials of other companies stated their payrolls would increase, following preliminary construction phases.

Southwestern General Construction Company is laying a railroad spur from the Bryan AFB supply area to the main runway, 1400 feet distant. Upon completion of the spur and upon receipt of supplies, work on the runway will be stepped up.

plies, and travel by employees would amount to not more than $5,680. Five hundred dollars would be labeled for emergencies. Clinicians for V. D. control amount to $750. Rent and utilities for the unit offices is set at $1,600.

Highlights of the health unit controversy occurred Friday, Aug. 4, when the Bryan City Commissioners deleted $9,075 from the city's annual contribution to the health unit; Tuesday, Aug. 7, when Dr. Brown announced his resignation; Wednesday, when the health unit's governing board met without success.

Thursday, when a special committee appointed by the board met to consider better methods of protraction, and ended when a trip was planned to Austin the following Monday to meet with state health officers.

Monday, Aug. 13, the group returned from Austin with suggestions that the budget be restudied and reworked. Thursday, Dr. McGill released new budget proposed by the board.

Rotarians Hear Aviation Man

At the regular Wednesday luncheon of the Bryan-College Station Rotary Club, W. D. Price, superintendent of communications for Pioneer Airlines was guest speaker.

Invocation was given by Nat Allen and guests were introduced by Bob Braley. The guests were Tom Cherry of New York and J. F. Prior, Jr. and J. W. Townsend, Jr. both of Houston.

Price said he wished to discuss the matter of communications from and with airplanes in relation to all commercial airlines.

He said the first progressive step was the four course range landing station, a method by which a landing station or strip maintained a four point range or contact with other stations.

The fan market station which was introduced in 1937 was an improvement by which lights went on the plane when it flew through the landing area, notifying the pilot of this fact, he explained.

About 1940, the Airways Traffic Control system was instituted by the Federal Government, Price said which proved very satisfactory until the great number of planes produced during World War II led to the adoption of the present method of flying known as instrument landing or instrument flying.

The airlines are sincerely interested in trying to get its customers through the air and on and off the ground with more speed. Price said the matter of communications was now being handled very efficiently.

At the end of the luncheon all rotarians were requested to bring some old magazines to the next weekly meeting to be given to Bryan AFB.

Walton Develops Education Criteria

E. V. Walton, associate professor of agricultural education, developed an education criteria at Michigan State College this Summer. He was doing research work on evaluation of agricultural education programs while he developed the standard.

The evaluation standard is for evaluating the operating conditions of multiple teacher vocational agriculture departments in high schools.

Walton examined vocational agriculture programs from 23 states and visited programs in Ohio during the three weeks he was at the Michigan State College.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.
