

The Last Word Put Junior to Bed, Take Wife Dancing

By Pat Morley

Press your glad rags, and call a baby-sitter to take care of Junior! It's dance-time at the MSC Saturday night after the OU game.

Tickets for the two-hour affair are only 50 cents, couple or stag. The gates will be thrown wide to the Assembly Room, the Ballroom, and the Terrace, according to the dance chairman, Dick Van Tyne. He assures us that refreshments will be available. Only the best music will be heard—featuring Tommy Dorsey, Tex Benke, Guy Lombardo, and others. (Records, of course!)

BIG KICK OF THE WEEK: A toddler at College View, learning Sunday school music and Aggie songs simultaneously, was heard singing loudly, "Onward Christian Soldiers, Hut Two Three Four!"

Laverne Vicari entertained her closest neighbors with a coffee Saturday morning. Guests for the informal party... Edith Greiser, Frances Murphy, Dorothy Hodges, Loy Rister, and Dolores McCurdy.

Laverne, an expert bridge player, won high prize at the Veterans' Wives Bridge Club last Thursday evening, and Norma took second honors. Jewell, president of the club, joins the winners in a cordial welcome to all veteran students' wives to meet "the girls" in rooms 2A and 2B of the MSC at 7:30 p. m. Thursday.

A special welcome to Catherine Arrington, of A-6-A College View, whose Student Wives' Survey shows that she belonged to a bridge club at the Bryan Field Annex, but hasn't gotten around to joining the MSC group. The club's strictly for fun, and beginners are being taught by mesdames E. E. McQuillen, D. W. Williams, and E. L. Angell. Refreshments are served at the meetings.

Jewell advises, "park your kids with papa, and we'll see you Thursday night!"

Some lucky Aggie couples made the trek to "Big D" for the Tech game. Among the elite were CE sophomore Raymond Hampton and Jo Ann, ME senior Gene Seale and Ruby Nell, Ag. Eco. senior Bob Parker and Mary.

EE junior Bob Vaughn and Yvonne, ME senior Lawrence Tanner and Billie, ME senior Earl Wood and Margie, were also seen. Leon and Margie had such a great time, they just made a week-end of it!

Speaking of big week-ends—the H. W. Barlow family painted Austin red last Saturday and Sunday. A fine high school football game was offered as the excuse, but a cute trick who marched at half-time gets our vote as the reason the Barlow boys dragged mom and dad all the way to the Land of the Teapippos.

"I haff a baby thitther!" These glad tidings were lisped Monday by three-year-old Jerry Trevino, Jr., of A-1-C College view. His little sister, and mother Gloria, were "just fine," and friends report that Jerry, Sr., a sophomore dairy husbandry major, is going to "pull through," too.

St. Joseph's hospital attendants report the birth of a baby boy to Capt. and Mrs. James C. Dunn, stationed with BAFB and living at 1204 Marsteller.

Aggie Ex Teaches Bakery Operation

Charles R. Collins of Bryan, holder of a BS degree in industrial education from A&M, has joined the staff of the American Institute School of Baking, Chicago, as an instructor in the maintenance and repair of bakery equipment.

Collins has been associated with the baking industry since 1927, both as a civilian employee and owner and as a baker in the navy.

He began his baking career working part time and during the summer vacation with the Marshall Baking Company in his home town of Marshall, Mo. In 1935 he went to the Weber Baking Company in Los Angeles, where he remained seven years, serving in a variety of jobs.

After returning from 22 months overseas service in the South Pacific, Collins was stationed at the naval air station, Kingsville, as baker-in-charge. For two years following his release from service, he owned and operated the Collins Bakery at Heame. More recently, Collins has been coordinator of Industrial Cooperative Training at Seguin High School, Seguin, Texas.

Series of Meets For Local Church

Featuring a different speaker each evening, the A&M Church of Christ will conduct a four-night series of gospel meetings, beginning Sunday. Students of A&M will conduct the devotional part of each meeting.

Leon Locke, Hungerford, will be the guest speaker Sunday at 10:45 a. m. and at 7:15 p. m. His subject will be "The Character of Caleb," and "The Mission of the Church."

Tex Williams, ex-Aggie now with the Boles Orphan Home, Quinlan, will discuss Monday night "Christian Benevolence."

Wyatt Sawyer, Evangelist of the Madisonville Church of Christ, will address the Tuesday evening audience on "The Mistakes of Jesus."

Closing the series Wednesday evening at 7:15, Dr. E. W. McMillan, president of the Southwestern Christian College, will consider "The Undertones About Us." At a special 8:30 p. m. meeting, Dr. McMillan will address all interested persons about the work of Christian education among the colored race.

SWC Picture (Continued from Page 3) overran Purdue 14-0 in their second game of the year. The Longhorns now stand at sixth in the national ratings, while the Aggies have dropped to tenth.

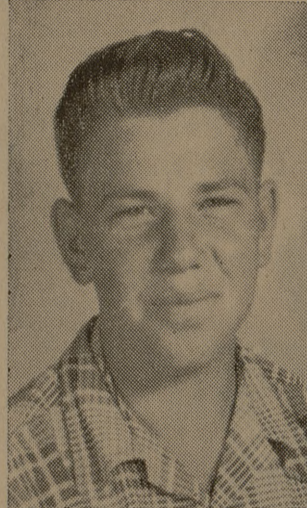

Baylor has played one game, defeating the University of Houston 19-0. In pre-season polls they placed in the top ten, but they have only seen action in one meeting. This accounts for their drop to number 19.

Larry Isbell is the big cog for the Bears, and without him, they would find themselves fighting it out with Rice for low man on the pole.

SMU also has a winning team with their ever threatening passing attack. Fred Benners is the Mustang wheel with his whip-like right arm. He set a record of almost impossible proportions with 21 connections out of 29 tries for 211 yards against Ohio State last Saturday. However the Mustangs don't pose much of a threat to the Aggies since the Cadets have a pass defense—and it's a good one.

At it looks now, Baylor and Texas will be the toughest games, but the Cadets should clear both these hurdles if they click on those days like they have shown everyone this year.

Great Britain Corners Marshall Aid to Europe

Of the billions the United States has spent for Marshall Plan aid to Europe through the ECA (Economic Cooperation Administration), England has taken the lion's share, according to R. L. Elkins, who addressed the College Station Kiwanis Club yesterday.

Speaking on the ECA program, Elkins said England has received more than double the amount spent in other European countries.

Elkins, a professor of business administration at A&M, was in England last year as assistant chief, Food and Agriculture Division of ECA to England. He was given a leave of absence from the college.

The professor said the money had been spent by the British improving roads, and farms, and buying such items as tractors which England hopes to utilize in increasing farm production.

In contrast to Fulton Lewis, Jr. who returned from his vacation in England bitterly reproaching the British for using American dollars to live a life of Riley, Elkins found the people hard working.

Following his talk, Elkins was asked whether he thought the billions the United States is spending for ECA can continue indefinitely. He answered that there was a possibility the American people could not maintain the heavy tax burden much longer.

The speaker justified aid to England on the grounds that it was necessary to protect the United States from the threat of Communism. He said if England fell a victim to Communism, Europe would fall.

Speaking of the Royal Family, Elkins said the King and Queen were an essential part of British tradition. He doubted that the British would ever economize on that angle.

McNeely Chairman Kiwanis Troop 102

Dr. John G. McNeely Monday was elected chairman of the Troop Committee of Boy Scout Troop 102 of College Station. He succeeds George W. Litton who has been acting chairman since the transfer from the Texas A&M College of Colonel Walter H. Parsons.

E. E. Ivy was named the representative of the Kiwanis Club of College Station, which sponsors Troop 102, on the board of the Brazos District, Boy Scouts of America. He succeeds C. A. Bonnen.

New members added to 102's Troop Committee include Ivy, Dr. Roy L. Donahue, Dr. J. R. Couch, H. A. Luther and I. H. Lloyd.

Holdover members are McNeely, Litton, Carl Birdwell, Walter A. Johnson, Taylor Wilkins and James D. Simpson. Sergeant Marvin T. Higginson is scoutmaster.

Economic Threats May Face South In Civil Rights Fight

Washington, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Senator Benton (D-Conn) suggested yesterday that "economic threats and reprisals" against the South might be considered in the senate campaign for civil rights legislation, but he hastened to add that he did not advocate such a course.

Benton's suggestion aroused the ire of senators from the Southern states and won no immediate support from friends of civil rights legislation.

Senator Underwood (D-Ky) told reporters "there is no North and South legislation," while Senator McClellan (D-Ark) warned "that's something that can cut two ways." There was sharper language from other Southerners who wouldn't be quoted.

Presiding at a meeting of the Senate Rules Committee, Benton denounced Southern-led filibusters which have blocked votes on civil rights bills in the past and suggested those who support the bills "take a very long look at appropriations bills affecting the Southern states."

Later Benton said he meant his remarks to be part of a listing of "all possible approaches to getting the Senate filibuster rule changed and pushing through some civil rights legislation."

The senate rule requires a vote of at least 64 members, or two-thirds of the whole senate, to impose a limitation on debate and thus gag filibusters. Senator Lehman (D-Lib-NY) said the rule in its present form is "a plain prescription for potential legislative paralysis."

"I dare say that no parliamentary body on earth has such a despotic, such a self-perpetuating rule," Lehman added.

Among other approaches suggested by Benton were a court test of the constitutionality of existing rules change or a civil rights bill, and an effort to require re-adoption of senate rules every two years, as the House does.

Without steps "other than persuasion," Benton told Senator Humphrey (D-Minn), "I don't believe you've got a chance." Humphrey is leading the move to change the rule.

WSCS Invited To Special Services

The A&M Methodist Women's Society of Christian Service met Monday at 7:45 p. m., with Mrs. Kenneth R. Bailey and Mrs. L. J. Horn sharing hostess duties.

Mrs. Jack Keese gave a devotional, using Helen Keller's inspirational "Three Days to See" as her theme. Mrs. Gordon Gay and Mrs. Paul Van Tassel discussed "Christian Missions and Human Rights."

A business meeting, conducted by Mrs. Clinton S. Walker, president of the WSCS, followed the program. Emphasis was placed upon the special services which will be held in the A&M Methodist Church nightly from October 6 until the 14th.

These services are in cooperation with the All-Texas Methodist Evangelistic Advance. The Rev. Marvin L. Boyd, District Superintendent from Plainville, will direct the meetings.

After the business meeting, Mrs. Bob Weddle served cake from a table decorated with a centerpiece of fall fruits and yellow chrysanthemums. Thirty members and two guests attended the meeting.

THE EXCHANGE STORE "Serving Texas Aggies"

Here It Is, Men! Two weeks ago we thanked you for the fine job you did in getting your high school friends to enroll in A&M this fall. We complimented you on carrying out your task like a true Aggie. And we told you then that a new job awaited. So Get Busy! This is your new job—an extension of your former one. It is to get the word about A&M to those of your friends who will be graduated from high school in January. A New Job In Order Yes, get busy! Invite your friends down to Aggeland for the weekend, to attend a football game with you. Take them to yell practice; give them a meal in the mess hall. Show how that Aggie spirit is formed and how it welds together the student body. Then they'll want to attend A&M. And you'll both benefit.
